Mr. English's letter accepting the democratic nomination for Vice President has been made public. The letter is somewhat longer than Gen. Hancock's, but is an equally interesting and able document.

We don't know whether our democratic friends in Le Sueur County, subscribe and read the Glencoe Register, but if they do, the does the Register gave them the July 29th issue, must have made them feel "kind der sick in the stomach." Hall evidently thinks they stand most anything.

Game Laws.
As a guide to our sportsmen, that they may keep within due bounds while hunting, we reproduce the following in regard to the killing of game, showing when it is lawful and when it is unlawful to hunt the game mentioned:

Woodcock, July 4th to Nov. 1st.
Prairie Chicken, Aug. 15th to Oct. 1st.
Quail or Partridge, Sept. 1st to Dec. 1st.
Ruffed Grouse or Pheasant, Sept. 1st to Dec. 1st.

Agouti Fox, Sept. 1st to May 15th.
Elk, Deer, etc., Nov. 1st to Dec. 15th.
Buck Trout, April 1st to Oct. 1st.

We publish this week the letter of Gen.
Hancock accepting the nomination tendered him by the Cincinnati Convention. The letter is brief and to the point. If elected to the office of President of the United States, Gen. Hancock will confine himself strictly to the duties, pertaining to the administration, and not interfere with the other departments of the government.
No violation of the Constitution or any of the amendments to it will be permitted under his administration, but the rights of all entitled to its protection will be fully secured and maintained.

No impartial person can read the letter without being convinced that Gen. Hancock is a statesman, and will prove as great and patriotic in civil life, as he did in the military service of his country.

Gen. Hancock's letter, written to Gen.
Sherman in 1876, during the electoral "count trouble," has been made public and is a VERDICT on the country. Instead of containing treasonable sentiments as they are asserted, "it is simply a straight-forward constitutional argument as to the right of the people to elect a President of the United States and have him duly installed without the interference of the military arm of the service. Contemplating the possibility of a vacancy in the office of President, Gen. Hancock proceeded to show how that vacancy could be filled in the shortest possible time and with due regard to the constitution of the Uni-

Lakotown Thoughts.

The exercises, in connection with the dedication of the renovated and newly-painted Zoar Moravian Church, on the 25th ult., were of a very impressive and interesting nature. The work of renovation was at once thorough and complete, both inside and outside, and Paragonage has also been generally fixed up. The Church had been most beautifully decorated for the occasion. Back of the Pulpit, against the wall, was a large floral cross, initialed with oak leaves, and having a white lily in the centre. A pretty floral wreath surmounted the entrance to Pastor's Room, while the floor leading to it was also handsomely decorated by floral designs. The pulpit was completely surrounded by floral work, with vases full of wild and tame flowers. In front of the Pulpit was a "Garden of God in our Refuge and Strength," set in, with good taste, among flowers and oak leaves, while underneath was another floral wreath. Organ was also decorated, as well as the wall back of it. It was ac-knowledgeed by all to have been the most elaborate and chaste floral decoration ever seen in Zoar Church, and foregoing gives but a poor idea of the thing—manner in which Pulpit was decorated by white and yellow lilies, a subject of several praise.
Among those present we saw Co. Supt.
Mix and family, as also the talented Prof.
from Young America, Prin. of Pub. Schools in this village. Church was crowded, and music fine.

Col. JAMES S. WHITE, of Milwaukee, who has just made a comprehensive tour of the State, is positive that Hancock will carry Wisconsin by a small but safe majority. He says that in every town and hamlet the Democrats are thoroughly organized, and the number hitherto Republicans who have joined the Hancock clubs has had the effect to demoralize the Democratic organizations, and no State organization has yet been effected. Col. White is, of course, close observer, not all apt to be carried away by enthusiasm, and his opinions are entitled to the greatest respect.—GLOBE.

GENL. HANCOCK'S

Letter of Acceptance.

GOVERNOR'S SALARY, NEW YORK CITY, July 29, 1880.—Gentlemen: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of July 13, 1880, expressing me formally of my nomination to the office of President of the United States by the national Democratic convention lately assembled in Cincinnati. I accept the nomination with grateful appreciation of the confidence reposed in me. The principles enunciated by the Cincinnati convention are those I have cherished in the past and shall endeavor to maintain in the future. The thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the constitution of the United States, among the results of the war for the Union.

ARE INVOLVABLE.

If called to the Presidency I should deem it my duty to resist with all my power any attempt to impair or destroy the Union. I am deeply of the conviction, which is my own and amendment to it.

SUPREMACY OF THE LAW.

The constitution is the basis of government. It is the supreme law of the land, and it is the duty of every citizen to support it to the letter. The government is created by the people, and it is the duty of the people to support it. The government is not permitted to do anything which is not authorized by the constitution. The government is not permitted to do anything which is not authorized by the constitution. The government is not permitted to do anything which is not authorized by the constitution.

SOME FAMOUS POETS.

BY N. W.

Of the poets, Shakespeare is said to be the sun among stars, around which all other stars cluster and gather illuminating rays of brilliancy, where Cladron shines as the brightest star in the constellation. Cladron's proper and peculiar sphere is that of a fanciful poet. His invention, it is said, is equal to any feat of construction, and his imagination to any opulence of adornment. After Shakespeare and Aristophanes, no dramatist has understood so well how to transport his reader or spectator to an ideal world.

As a poet, Aristophanes is said to be immortal. He was an Athenian citizen, of the tribe of Pandionis, and the deme Cydathene. His birth has been placed about the year 448 B. C. Aristophanes was a representative of the old comedy, which is said to have lasted about eighty years and to have flourished about fifty-six years, 460-404 B. C.

The middle comedy covered a period of about seventy years, 390-330 B. C., its chief poets being Antiphones, Alexis, Plato, Comens, Theopompus and Strutius. The new comedy was in vogue about seventy years, 260-190 B. C., having for its foremost representatives, Menander, Philomenon and Diphilus.

Of Aristophanes it was said, the wildest flights of extravagance were permitted to him. He could deal the keenest thrust or make the most earnest appeal, and the next moment, if he wished, change the subject and vary the severe strain by burlesque. His truest and highest faculty is revealed by those wonderful bits of lyric writing in which he soars above everything that can move laughter or tears, and makes the clear air thrill with the notes of song as free, as musical and as wild as that of the nightingale invoked by his own charms in the "Birds."

The speech of Demosthenes in the "Clouds," the praises of country life in the "Peace," the chorus of the "Frogs," above all perhaps, and the beautiful "Chant of the Initiated," are the true glories of Aristophanes.

They are said to be the strains not of an artist, but of one who warbles for pure gladness of heart, in some place made bright by the presence of a God. Nothing else in Greek poetry is said to have quite this wild sweetness of the woods. Shakespeare alone, perhaps, has it in combination with a like richness and fertility of fancy.

As a poet, we find Chaucer a delightful companion. It is said of Chaucer's poems there is so much vivacity of movement, such tender play of feeling, such humor, such delight in nature, in green leaves and sweet air, sunshine and bird-singing, the open air on the breezy hillside, or by the running brook, seems to be the only proper atmosphere for such a poet; but Chaucer's sweet verse were first read under wholly different conditions—in tapestried chambers, to the gracious ears of Lords and ladies. It was from such an audience that Chaucer received in a vapor what he poured back in a flood.

It is said, if you could place yourself within the circle for which the poet wrote, you would see the smile play on sweet lips as he proceeds; you see the tear glisten in the eye; you see the needle laid aside as the mind of the fair listener is transported to the poet's flowery mead, or plied more briskly as she bends over her work to conceal her laughter at his more-vulgar adventures.

All of Chaucer's works are steeped in the nectar of the court—the perfumes of chivalrous sentiment breathe from them all. His "Court of Love," "Canterbury Tales," "Fair Maid of Kent," are some of his best.

It has been said that he was only 18 years of age when he produced "The Court of Love." He was from 1340 to 1400.

Among the poets of the eighteenth century Thomas Chatterton occupies a place altogether unique. It is said that he was a marvelous example of matured intellectual precocity, and also as a student of English literature, and as a poet remarkable in an age of varied literary excellence. He was only 17 years and 9 months old, yet he had already written poems which fill two ample volumes, and which now, upward of a century after his death, command our admiring wonder for the rare evidence of genius and sustained power they display. And it is thought that, even now, comparatively few know what a rich vein of romance and true poetry lies concealed under the antique guise of the "Rowley Poems."

He was writing spirited satires at 10 years of age, and he produced some of his finest satirical verses before he was 16 years of age.

The age at which he died, before he had even reached manhood, adds to the tender pity which his fate awakens even now.

Chatterton was only 17 when he perished, despairingly, in his miserable garret.

On the 24th of August, 1770, he retired, for the last time, to his attic in Brook street, carrying with him the poison which, from becoming thoroughly discouraged and disheartened, he chose to take. In the morning he was found, with limbs and features distorted by his

OUR JUVENILES.

Childhood's Gold.

They need not go so far away,
Through heat and cold, to hunt for gold;
They might beside us sit or stray—
Our hands are full as they can hold.

Gold! Gold is poured out of the sky
From rags of sun till day is done;
With falling leaves it flutters by,
In liquid gold the rivers run.

'Twas scattered all the way from school,
In stars and bells adown the dells;
We children gathered aprons full,
Where little Dandelion dwells.

And yellow Cowslip to our feet Came, like a King, his hoard to bring;
And Columbine, with nod so sweet,
Shook gold upon our path—gay thing!

What golden gleams with such wine
As the bee lures from buttercups?
What gold beads on the wet grass shine,
Sparkling to breezy downs and ups!

Our homes are sweet upon the hills,
Where love is sure, and life is pure,
And smiles every season fill;
How can a country child be poor?

No robes scarce our midnight hours;
No coffers cold our treasure hold;
Dewdrops and sunbeams, stars and flowers—
Gold! gold! Who shares our childhood's gold?

A Discontented Soldier.

"Now, lads, there's the battery; remember the Emperor himself is watching you, and carry it in true French style. The moment you get into it make yourselves fast against attack; and mind that any man who comes out again to pick up the wounded, even though I myself should be among them, shall be tried for disobedience as soon as the battle's over."

So spoke Col. Lasalle to his French grenadiers just before the final charge that decided the battle of Wagram. Then he waved his sword, and shouted, "En avant!"

Forward swept the grenadiers like a torrent, with the shout which the Austrians opposed to them already knew to their cost. Through blinding smoke and pelting shot they rushed headlong on, with mouths parched, faces burned, and teeth set like a vise. Ever and anon a red flash rent the murky cloud around them, and the cannon-shot came tearing through their ranks, mowing them down like grass. But not a man flinched, for the same thought was in every mind, that they were fighting under the eye of their "Little Corporal," as they affectionately called the terrible Napoleon.

Suddenly the smoke parted, and right in front of them appeared the dark muzzles of cannon and the white uniforms of Austrian soldiers. One last shout, which rose high above all the roar of the battle, the bayonets went glittering over the breastwork like the spray of a breaking wave, and the battle was won.

"Where's the Colonel?" cried a voice, suddenly.

There was no answer. The handful of men who remained of the doomed band looked meaningly at each other, but no one spoke. Strict disciplinarian as he was, seldom passing a day without punishing some one, the old Colonel had nevertheless won his men's hearts completely by his reckless courage in battle; and every man in the regiment would gladly have risked his life to save that of "the old growler," as they called him.

But if he were not with them, where was he? Outside the battery the whole ground was scourged into flying jets of dust by a storm of bullets from the fight that was still raging on the left. In such a cross-fire it seemed as if nothing living could escape, and if he had fallen there, there was but little hope for him.

"I see him!" cried a tall grenadier. "He's lying out yonder, and alive, too, for I saw him wave his hand just now. I'll have him here in five minutes, boys, or be left there beside him."

"But you mustn't disobey orders, Du bois," said a young Captain (now the oldest surviving officer, so terrible had been the havoc), hoping by this means to stop the reckless man from rushing upon certain death. "Remember what the Colonel told you—that, even if he were left among the wounded, no one must go out to pick them up."

"I can't help that," answered the soldier, laying down his musket and tightening the straps of his cross-belts. "Captain, report Private Dubois for insubordination and breach of discipline. I'm going out to bring in the Colonel."

And he stepped forth unflinchingly into the deadly space beyond.

They saw him approach the spot where the Colonel lay; they saw him bend over the fallen man, shielding him from the shot with his own body. Then he was seen to stagger suddenly, as if from a blow; but the next moment he had the Colonel in his arms, and was struggling back over the shot-torn ground, through the dying and the dead. Twice he stopped short, as if unable to go farther; but on he came again, and had just laid his officer gently down inside the battery, when, with his comrades' shout of welcome still ringing in his ears, he fell fainting to the earth, covered with blood.

By the next morning Col. Lasalle had recovered sufficiently to amaze the whole regiment by putting under arrest the man who had saved his life; but, the moment it was done, the Colonel mounted his horse and rode off to headquarters at full gallop. In about an hour he was seen coming back again, side by side with a short, square-built man in a gray coat and cocked hat, at sight of whom the soldiers burst into deafening cheers, for he was no other than this

And what if we were to shoot these for insubordination?

"My life is your Majesty's, now as always," answered the grenadier, boldly. "And if I must choose between dying myself and leaving my Colonel to die, the old regiment can better spare a common fellow like me than a brave officer like him."

A sudden spasm shook the old Colonel's iron face as he listened, and even Napoleon's stern gray eyes softened as few men had ever seen them soften yet.

"Thou'rt wrong there," said he, "for I would not give a 'common fellow' of thy sort for twenty Colonels, were every one of them as good as my Old Lasalle here. Take this, Sergeant Dubois—" and he fastened his own cross of the Legion of Honor to Pierre's breast. "I warrant me thou'lt be a Colonel thyself one of these days."

And, sure enough, five years later Pierre Dubois was not only a Colonel, but a General.

CRAFT OF RUSSIAN WOLVES.

Wolves, when plotting mischief, work in numbers. They prey upon wild horses, and two are sufficient to destroy the most powerful horse. Their mode of attack is ingenious. If there is no snow or but little on the ground, two wolves approach in the most playful and caressing manner, lying, rolling, and frisking about, until the too-careless and unsuspecting victim is completely put off his guard by curiosity and familiarity. During this time the gang, squatting, are looking at a distance. After some time spent in this way, the two assailants separate, when one approaches the horse's head, the other his tail, with a shyness and cunning peculiar to themselves. At this stage of the attack their frolicsome approaches become very interesting. The former is a mere decoy; the latter is the real assailant and keeps his eyes steadily fixed on the hamstrings or flanks of the horse. When the critical moment arrives the attack is instantaneous. Both wolves spring at their victim at the same instant—one at the throat, the other at the flank—and, if successful, which they generally are, the hind one never lets go his hold till the horse is completely disabled. Instead of springing forward or kicking, to disengage himself, the horse turns round and round, without attempting a defense. The wolf before then springs behind, to assist the other. The sinews are then cut, and in half the time I have been describing the horse is on its side. His struggles are fruitless. The victory is won. At this signal the lookers-on close in at a gallop; but the small fry of followers crowd at a respectful distance until their superiors are gorged, and then they take their turn unopposed.

THE DEMANDS OF SCIENCE ON FAITH.

It is somewhat remarkable that a man so keen and clear-headed as Prof. Huxley can think to settle the origin of all things by merely pushing the origin of transformation from the non-living elements to living organisms back a few millions of years. A miracle differs from ordinary phenomena, not in degree, but in kind. Granted a force able to transform one atom of inorganic matter into a living germ, and we have a God capable of creating a universe. With all his brilliancy of intellect and power of logical thought, Prof. Huxley can believe that somehow, in some infinite distance of time, by a fortuitous combination of force and matter, some fragment of inorganic matter became endowed with life, which, by the action of blind force, developed into the well-ordered system of the organic world, and yet he scoffs at the absurdity of the belief that will, the one uncorrelated force of which we know, should have anything to do with that or any other transformation. Truly the faith that science demands puts to shame the faith of religion.—Scrutiner's Monthly.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL.

Curls and cosmetics are all in requisition to enhance the beauty of "the human face divine," but what is the result? Youth's roses only flee the faster—old age will creep on apace; rouge cannot hide its wrinkles, nor can it make any face beautiful. We are decided believers in the old adage, "Handsome is that handsome does." No face has true beauty in it that does not mirror the deeds of a noble soul. There is not a thought, word, or deed that does not leave its autograph written on the human countenance; and we care not whether kind nature has given her child an ugly face or a handsome one, if the heart that beats underneath all is warm and loving. And if the soul that looks out from the eyes be true and pure, that face will be beautiful always, for it has found the true fountain of youth; and, though time may fold the hair in silver, and furrow the brow, yet there will ever be a beauty lighting it up that years cannot dim, for the heart and soul never grow old.

A rather amusing incident occurred at a church prayer meeting at Westfield a few evenings since. Near the front sat a young couple who are quite devoted to each other, and soon to be married. The good deacon, reading the meeting took for his topic "Love," and, growing warm with the subject, said: "Brothers and sisters, all around us can see the fruits of love—aye, right before us 'seen in all its God-like beauty and tenderness.' Unconsciously the speaker was pointing directly to the before-mentioned couple, and while the young woman was trying to hide her blushes and her companion to look unconcerned, the audience smiled, the deacon grew embarrassed, and it was some time before people's thoughts were toned down to their usual placidity.—Springfield Republican.

HISTORY.

The Modern History of Archery. Archery is the art or exercise of shooting with a bow and arrow. The origin of the bow as an instrument of war is lost in obscurity. With all the ancient peoples, both civilized and barbaric, the bow was a favorite weapon, and skill in the use of it was regarded by the Scythians as a princely accomplishment. The Greeks and Romans employed archers to draw the enemy into action, and exploits of the ancient Egyptians rivaled those of the archers of the middle ages. There is no record of the bow in France until the reign of Charlemagne, in the beginning of the eighth century, although we have evidence that in England both the Anglo-Saxons and the Danes employed it in the chase, as well as in battle against the primitive inhabitants of England, many years before the conquest. The probability is that it was first introduced as a military weapon into Britain by the Romans; but it was under the Norman rule that the practice of archery, in that island, was not only greatly improved, but generally diffused throughout the country, so that England soon became famous for its archery, and her archers took precedence of those of every other nation. To preserve this superiority by constant practice appears to have been the study of many of her monarchs, and numerous statutes for enforcing and regulating the use of the bow among the people were enacted from early times until after the invention of fire-arms. Many laws were also made for securing the presence in distant and obscure parts of the country of persons skilled in the manufacture of bows and all the apparatus pertaining to archery. These laws appear to have been absolutely necessary, for in the olden time the English chiefly depended for their success in battle upon the bravery and expertness of their archers, whose appearance in the field generally led to success.

Richard I. performed great exploits with his archers in the Holy Land, where, according to Gibbon, 300 archers and seven hundred knights, headed by the King, sustained the charge of the whole Turkish and Saracen army. It was in his reign that the renowned Robin Hood flourished in Sherwood forest. Edward II. levied a company of "Northumbrian Archers" in the year 1314, for the invasion of Scotland.

The battles of Cressy and Poitiers were gained by the English archers, in the years 1346, 1356, respectively. Edward III. was extremely jealous of the honor of the bow, and anxious that its glory should be maintained.

In the early part of his reign it was ordered that the Sheriff of England should each provide 500 white bows and 500 bundles of arrows for the then impending war with France. Edward III. also commanded the general practice of archery on Sunday and holidays by the people in lieu of the ordinary rural pastimes, which were forbidden on pain of imprisonment. In the year 1402 the English archers won the battle of Harfildon, and in 1403, at the battle of Shrewsbury, where Hotspur was slain, the most terrible havoc was made by the archers on both sides.

In the reign of Henry IV. it was enacted that all arrowheads should be well hardened at the points with steel, and stamped with the name of the maker. In the reign of Edward IV. it was enacted that every Englishman and every Irishman living with an Englishman should have an English bow of his own height. In 1417 the archers of the army of Henry V. won the battle of Agincourt. This King directed the Sheriff of counties to take six wing feathers from every goose for feathering the arrows. In 1478 archery was encouraged in Ireland by statute. In the year 1429 James I. of Scotland, who was himself an excellent bowman, revived the practice of archery among his subjects. In the reign of Henry VII. (1485) archery occupied an important position in the fashionable pastimes of the kingdom, and upon the occasion of the marriage of Henry with the Princess Elizabeth, it formed a great feature among the nuptial festivities, the King himself joining in the shooting, with "heartiness and glee. Queen Catherine also showed deep interest in the fascinating pastime, and in the year 1679 she presented a silver badge to the "Marshall of the Fraternity of Archers." Both the King and Queen frequently reviewed the numerous associations of archers then existing. In the spring of 1632 a grand fête was given by the London Artillery Company at the artillery grounds, at which there were present upward of 1,000 archers, and it is said that the gala outshine anything of its kind that had previously been seen in England; but from that time until the beginning of the present century the attractions appear to have been overlooked and its practice neglected. "There is," remarks Mr. H. A. Ford, "no exercise more healthy or more rational, or which returns more true and genuine gratification to the man who practices it. As an exercise for the ladies it brings all the muscles generally into healthy action; and is most admirably suited to most of the requirements of the fair sex, calling the faculties both of body and mind into gentle and healthy play, yet depressing none—without, most elegant and graceful."—Chicago Ledger.

Mr. J. E. Thompson is said to have composed his poems with pen in hand, not his brook without it. His poetic muse visits him chiefly in the open air, during his walks, or while floating in a boat on the pond near his house. He often holds as many as fifty lines in his mind in this way, and in writing them down he revises them repeatedly.

HAZING.

How It Is Done at West Point and Annapolis.

There is hazing at the colleges, but the Sophomore class has not the facilities for indulging in the pastime that are possessed by third-class men at West Point and Annapolis. The third class is above the new-comer, the "pleb" or "youngster," and exercises a certain sort of supervision over him. He is made superintendent of the fourth-class floor. As he has just come into a little authority, his delights to exercise it. The "pleb" is "spotted" or reported for everything. He is not spoken to like a gentleman, but more like a dog. He has to put a "six" after every answer to an upper classman. He must stand up and take off his cap when one of these august and important individuals enters his room. He must stand and have his looks, figure, and his name made fun of by a phre, and his name strap a foot shorter than himself. The language used is often insulting, but it is seldom that the pleb dares to resent it. The hazing generally tries to be very funny. If he happens to get something off that approaches wit, and the youngster smiles, he is then pitched into for daring to laugh at an upper classmate. This is the milder form of "hazing;" it is called "running." To most young men it is more galling than "hazing" proper. The latter affects the body, while the former consists in slurs and personal abuse. On drill the youngster is yelled at upon every opportunity by the cadet officers, and sneering remarks are made about it in the manner in which he conducts himself.

As a general thing none but the third class are supposed to haze; but all three of the upper classes combine to make the new cadet as uncomfortable as possible. There are different forms of hazing. One that is always practiced more or less every year is the "shirt-tail parade." After taps, when everybody is supposed to be in bed, a few choice spirits of the third class go to the floor where the plebs are in bed. They turn them out, and make each one arm himself with a broom. Night-clothes are all that are worn. The plebs are organized into companies, and under the dim light in the corridor are drilled in all their phantasm-like picturesqueness. The wardrobes in the cadets' rooms are very narrow; the youngsters are made to climb them very quickly. Often the wardrobe falls on them.

At Annapolis a sheet is stretched across the wardrobes, and the two roommates are made to go through the evolutions of loosing, reefing and furling sail. They get dusty, and, what is worse, are often kept in their cramped positions on top of the wardrobe until their limbs ache; they are made to get on the table, "dice and sing; no matter whether they can dance or sing, they have to go through the motions.

A favorite pastime for the testive hazer is to make one youngster get in the wardrobe toasting, while another acts as if he was turning the crank of a hand organ. Whenever a new cadet is wanted, the outside man taps on the wardrobe and the singer sings him another lay. The mattresses are taken from the beds in several rooms and piled up around a few selections of the genus pleb, until the hollow column reaches near the ceiling. Into the top of this water is poured upon the recumbent youngsters until the hazers get tired. Sometimes, but not often, a particularly cheeky young man is made to eat soap. Frequently he is shaved with a blunt piece of the common soap being used for lather, and a whisk broom for a brush.

If a youngster gets to exhibiting too much "gall," and evinces a determination not to submit to his many persecutions, he is taken into a dark room, where some twenty or thirty upper classmen are assembled. The operation of "passing around" is then carried out. This consists in one man giving the rebellious pleb a punch in the ribs, knocking him to the next man on the right. He is carried around the circle until he either gives in or becomes exhausted. This treatment is known to bring even the most cheeky youngster to a proper sense of what is due by him to the upper classman.

Frequently twenty or thirty plebs are gotten into a room, and seated in chairs. The most religious one that can be found is made to take the desk and preach a sermon from a text in the Bible. His audience at proper intervals says "Amen." He then calls on "a brother for prayer." The prayer has to be forthcoming. Young men are made to sit on their beds and with a broom pretend to row until exhausted. Tying plebs up in sheets and hanging them out of the windows is not so common now as it used to be. Cases are frequent, however, of tying them to their beds on their backs and leaving them there. Running a piece of rope into a room over the transom after taps, and then making it fast to the feet of the pleb, is common. The youngster is suddenly awakened by feeling himself drawn out of bed. He is pulled up by his feet to the transom and lowered again. These are some of the many ways that the pleb is made to feel that he is to be obedient and servile to his uppers.

POISONED TOYS.

In Paris, there have been several cases of poisoning of children who have played with, and doubtless sucked, colored toys, and now the Prefect of Police has ordered that all colored toys offered for sale and supposed to contain poisonous matter shall be seized and sent to the municipal laboratory for examination.

FARM NOTES.

Poor, March, who has tested several methods of combating the weevil, reports that most satisfactory results were gained with the vapor of bisulphide of carbon. The peas after harvesting were put in an air-tight box with a saucer or two of liquid bisulphide of carbon. In three or four hours the weevils are all killed, while the seeds retain their original form and may be kept throughout the winter without further damage from the weevil.

FOREST TREES IN KANSAS.—"In 1874 I planted an ash, grove of half an acre which is now thrifty with trees of good size. In 1876 I planted half an acre in black-walnut in rows three feet apart. This year I shall cut out every other row and use the largest for posts in my vineyard. This spring I have planted another grove of about three-fourths of an acre of catalpa and locs-elder, planted in quincunx order and the rows eight feet apart. When the box-elder is large enough for posts, will cut them out and then have a catalpa grove."—N. N. Holzburg, Lindburg, Kan.

SHADY TREES by the roadside are often set out with much care and at a considerable expense, and then left to grow as they please, completely neglected. Thus they soon become unsightly objects along the road instead of adorning it. They should be invariably staked, if necessary, to keep them straight, the ground kept loose around them, and, if in any danger of suffering from drought, be well mulched. Above all, cut away all sprouts as fast as they appear, for they suck out the life of the tree, and are frequently the cause of its dying. Trim the trees nicely and artistically, as they grow, and in a few years they will make a grateful summer shade, and a magnificent adornment of the public road.

SUMMER PRUNING GRAPE VINES.—It is an injury to any plant to take away much of its foliage when it is growing. Still, it is often a greater injury to leave some special object we have in view to have all the foliage on. For instance, in grape growing we want a few good strong canes to bear fruit next year, and not a large number of small and weak ones; or we need some strong branches low down on the vine; so we have to take away the branches we do not want in order to have the vine put all the strength into the branches we need. This is the principle involved in the summer pruning of grape vines. But, not to weaken the vine by the loss of much green foliage, we should take the earliest opportunity to take out and shorten useless branches. By being taken out early in the season, there is not much injury to the vine, and there is more time left for those which are left to profit by the absence of the useless ones.—Mechan, in the Tribune and Farmer.

BROKEN EGGS FOR CHICKS.—In some localities it is difficult to get chicks through the first two weeks after they are hatched; for the little complaints of this early period are often more numerous and critical than at any other period of their lives. Feed is the first consideration, and pure water a great essential for them from first to last. Corn-meal is the one article of chicken diet which has been the main dependence for generations; but some thorough experimenters with rice convince us that for very young chicks it is equal to anything, if not superior to everything else. Broods fed upon rice alone all lived and grew finely on a single handful at a feed for the hen and her brood. An inferior quality, known to the trade as broken rice, is just as good for feed, and it takes so little for feed that the expense is no greater in the Northern States than corn-meal, while in the South it will be the cheapest feed known.—Poultry Yard.

PUTTING UP WIRE FENCES.—A writer in the American Agriculturist gives the following plan for putting up barbed-wire fences: A suitable stick of wooden rod, being put through the center of the spool, is laid across the top of the rear end of the wagon-box, the projecting cleats preventing it from slipping back. The end being fastened to the first post, the wagon is driven along the line, the wire unwinding from the top of the spool. When the end of the spool is reached or a sufficient quantity is reeled off, this end of the wire is twisted or tied to one of the spokes of the hind wheel near the fence, near the hub. The axle is then lifted to clear the wheel. The team is then unhitched and the wagon-tongue fastened to a post or crow-bar thrust into the ground. Then by turning the wheel by hand the wire winds around the hub, and we have strong lever power, sufficient to stretch the wire very taut through its whole length. It is then only necessary to pass along and staple it fast to the posts. At first the barbs may catch in the grass, and it may be necessary to lift it by hand in some places until a few turns of the wheel bring it from the ground. The operation is repeated for the other wires.

A FIVE-YEAR-OLD daughter of one of our citizens observed to him, in the presence of company, at breakfast: "You mustn't go off without kissing me, papa." "I never forget to do it, do I?" he asked, surprised. "You may not forget it, but sometimes you go off mad, you know," she artlessly replied. The company consulted their coffee.

A NOR who had charge of a very stubborn donkey was one day beating it numerously because it would not go, when the minister of the parish, coming up, censured him for his cruelty. The boy resented the interference, and exclaimed: "I'm sure you needn't care; it's none of your congregation."

KETTER AND HIS HOME.

Henry Ketter, the pianist, not only left behind him the good will and hearty favor due this most accomplished artist and courteous gentleman, but as well the memory of a thorough and matchless snub to one of these intolerable vulgarisms who form at least the superstructure of Tricost society, that we could afford to ever hold him in grateful remembrance for the latter reason alone.

It appears that Mr. Ketter was invited to a party at the house of one of our local plutocrats, a large importing merchant, and attended the same with his wife, precisely as would any other expected guest.

To his surprise, however, he found the company sitting solemnly around as though in a concert hall, and himself at once pressed to "play something" by the host. The courteous Frenchman complied, and, in response to repeated requests, continued to entertain the company for nearly two hours. When, at last, he was thoroughly fatigued, supper was announced, whereupon the host arose and said:

"You've got piano punching down fine, Ketter, old fellow. Now, if you'll play these young folks a few quadrilles and polkas while the balance of us go down to hash, I'll send up Martha Louise to relieve you, presently; or if you like you can have something sent up and eat it right here on the piano. I first kinder calculated to have engaged a couple of fiddlers, but the old lady said she thought you wouldn't mind. I'll make it all right when you go."

The astounded artist gazed at the speaker (who was well known to have been a barkeeper in the "good old days") for a few moments, utterly dumfounded; then, controlling himself, he gravely turned his back and began playing dance music, as requested. When the company had all assembled in the parlors he raised his voice and said: "Play, let some whisky, lemons and sugar be brought in."

It was done.

"Now then," said Mr. Ketter, fixing his eye on the host: "now then, mix us some cocktails, my good fellow; every man to his bowl."

There was an awful silence, and then the shoddyest, with a ghastly attempt to carry off the joke, prepared the drink and handed it to the musician.

The latter drank the beverage critically. "You're losing practice, my good man; the fellow at the hotel bar does much better. There, you may keep the change," and, tossing the almost-asphyxiated millionaire a half dollar, he put his wife under his arm and walked out.—San Francisco Post.

IMPURE BLOOD.
A torpid liver and dyspepsia cause aurose-ness and irritability, and the mind becomes dull and cloudy. Persons suffering in this way are afflicted with the ordinary ailments and pleasures of life.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS
is the most powerful Blood Purifier and Tonic known, and it at the same time builds up
and fortifies the system, invigorates the liver, aids digestion, and cures dyspepsia.
It is fast and sure, and all other medicines offered for similar purposes. It is composed of barks, roots, seeds, gums and iron.
No remedy has ever gained such wide reputation in so short a time for purifying, toning up, and reinforcing the whole system, and imparting cheerfulness, vivacity and buoyancy of spirit, as the sovereign remedy.

Here and There.

Oh! what nice weather.

Grain is all cut in this vicinity.

It was very cool on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Farmers are busy stacking. One week more will secure the crop.

The shower last Thursday night, did a "heap of good" to garden stuff.

Corn has been doing splendidly lately and farmers anticipate a good crop.

The season has been very favorable to Potatoes. The yield will be very large and potatoes good.

Mr. Jas. Dilly, "vine host" of the Merchants Hotel, has been painting and papering the inside of his hotel, which will add to the comfort of his many patrons.

Dr. Dorsey, and Messrs. Snider and Day of Glenwood, came down Saturday evening and started over to Lake Minnetonka on Sunday for a day's recreation on the beautiful shores of that far famed lake.

The brick work on the Catholic Seminary is completed and Mr. Grates has done himself proud. Now we will see what Mr. Geiser can do.

The stone work on the foundation for the new residence of the Catholic Father of this diocese is completed, and Mr. Grates will commence on the brick work next Monday. It will make a nice building.

This was a good year for Machine Agents, in addition to selling a lot of new machinery, they also disposed of all the second hand machines which they held over from last year.

Business has been quite dull in town the past two weeks. Hardly any farmers were to be seen upon our streets. The fair last Saturday, was also very slimly attended. Every body being in the harvest field.

M. H. Moyres, Insurance Agent, has placed two very neat insurance signs in front of the second story of the HERALD building, in which he has his office. Matt is bound to keep up with the times.

The Population of Carver Co.
The population of Carver County in 1870 was 11,586, and in 1875, 13,033, while the census of 1880, makes it 14,193, showing an increase of 2,607, in ten years, which is perhaps as much as could be expected in view of the large emigration from this County to the frontier counties in the past five years.

Repairing Bridges &c.
A large number of Mechanics have been at work rebuilding the bridges and trestle works on the H. & D. Railroad in this vicinity, the past month. The bridges and trestles, have been put in the very best of condition and are now perfectly safe.

Road Master Dana, has also placed the road bed on the H. & D. Road, between Hastings and Glenwood in first class order.
He does nothing by halves.

Sewing Machines.
We publish the advertisement of the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine in another column. Gerhard Schroers, agent.
The Wheeler & Wilson is one of the very best machine in the market, and we are pleased to learn that our friend Gerhard is meeting with success in selling them. It gives the very best of satisfaction in every instance, which speaks volumes in favor of that machine. Call on Gerhard.

Brick Business.
The weather of the past month has been very favorable to our brick manufacturers. They have pushed every thing to the very limit, and are now able to meet the extensive demand being made on them every day.

Three kilns are now on fire which contain over 700,000 brick. A couple month of this kind of weather will help our brick men out amazingly.

Our young friend Henry Stroheck, came up town last Tuesday morning with a broad smile on his countenance, which we learned was occasioned by the arrival that morning of a young son in his family. Well Henry accept our hearty congratulations.

LOCAL NEWS.

The Board of County Commissioners adopted the following resolution at their last session:

"Resolved, that the proposition of Mr.
J. O. Brunius to place the monuments of each section corner for the sum of $3.50 a piece, be and is hereby accepted."

The law makes it the duty of the commissioners to establish permanent monuments to indicate the section corners as located by the United States Survey, and while this provision of law is a wise one,
and the work contracted for by the commissioners one which will be of very great benefit to the citizens of the County, still we are very much afraid that the commissioners in this instance have unwittingly burdened the County with a much larger bill of expense than is necessary.

We are informed that several competent surveyors stand ready to do the work called for by the contract between the commissioners and Mr. Brunius, for just ONE HALF of the price which the commissioners have agreed to pay Mr. Brunius, and if such is the fact, the County is certainly a loser by the contract made. We understand that the number of posts to be established throughout the County is somewhere in the neighborhood of five or six hundred, and will require an outlay of nearly or quite two thousand dollars, ($2,000.) We think it would have been much wiser for our commissioners to have carefully investigated the actual cost of the job before entering into a contract involving such a large expenditure as this, without inviting public bids for the work.

It is but doing commissioner Kugler, justice to say, that he voted against the measure, saying that he wished more time to investigate the amount of expenditure it would involve and the advisability of the measure at this time.

We shall refer to this subject hereafter.

NEW ADVS.—The following new advs. appear in this issue of the HERALD.

Brewery Improvement.
George Karcher, lessee of the Union Brewery of this city, has been compelled by his increasing business, to add an engine to the motive power of his establishment. He recently purchased a six horse power engine and an improved pump in St. Paul, and will at once erect an addition to the Brewery building for an engine room 16 x 16.

George is a first class Brewer and intends hereafter to make as good beer as is manufactured in the State. Success.

The Harvest.
The cool weather of the past week has been very favorable to harvest work and the farmers in Chaska, Laketown and Chanhassen are nearly through in cutting and many of them are engaged in stacking. In a few days the harvest will be over in this section of the County, and one of the best harvest secured, for many years.

Award of Damages.
The award of the commissioners for damage to the few remaining pieces of land on the Hastings & Dakota Cut off, not acted upon by the first commission, has been filed. It is proportionally much less than the award of the first commission.

The award is as follows:
John Eiden, $670.00
Gerhard Lenzen, 117.00
E. L. How and others, 230.00
E. W. Pierce, 10.00
Eli Stone, 161.00
Bishop Grace, 15.00
$1203.00

BUSINESS NOTICE.
As soon as harvest is over we shall send our agent out on a collection tour. He will call on the citizens of Chaska on or about Sept. 1st. We have over $500 on our books due this office for advertising, so we request our friends to be prepared to pay on presentation of bill.

PERSONAL.—Hon. H. B. Strait, was in town last Saturday, calling on his many friends.

Rev. Father Braun, of Benton, and Father Lette, of Faribault, formerly pastors of the Chaska congregation, was in town last week calling on their many friends. Father Lette, will make a trip to Europe this summer.

Lucien Warner, Esq., of St. Paul, was in town on Tuesday, looking over his business interests.

August Hartell, R. E. Patterson and Ludwig Drews, of Norwood, were in town last Monday and made our office a very pleasant visit.

Capt. Mills and Fred Wommer, of Carver, were in town calling on friends last Sunday.

OUR AGENT.
M. H. Moyres, has been appointed agent for the HERALD. He is authorized to contract for advertising and collect subscribers and also to receive in our name, for money due this office.
Chaska, Aug 3rd 1880.

Mode of Assessment.

The last number of the Carver Free Press, contains a long article on the necessity for a change in the manner of assessing property—from the present town assessor system to some other and more effective way of getting at the true value of the assessable property of the County. We agree with the editor of the Press, that there should be a change in the system.—
We have heretofore advocated the system of County Assessor, that is, we think that if our laws were so amended, as to provide for the appointment of a County Assessor, and making him responsible, under heavy bonds, for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office, the DESIDERATUM would be reached. We also believe that the Board of County Commissioners should be intrusted with the appointment of the assessor, as thereby they are made equally responsible with the Assessor. We invite discussion on the subject.

Notice of Dissolution of Co-partnership.
The co-partnership heretofore existing between the undersigned under the firm name of Hammer & Beierstetle is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

M. Hammer will continue the business in Chaska, and will pay all indebtedness of the Chaska branch of said firm and collect all demands due the same.

Presidential Electors:
AT LARGE.
JAS. J. GREEN, of Le Sueur county.
JOHN FREDERICH, of Polk.
DISTRICT,
JOHN C. WISE, of Blue Earth County.
GEO. E. SKINNER, of Rice.
T. O. MEADY, of Wright.

The veteran republican, Gen. Dan Sickles, is about to publicly declare himself in favor of Hancock and English.

THE WACHTER "AM ERIC," the most influential German paper in Northern Ohio, and the VOLKBLATT, of Pittsburgh, Penna., have come out strongly for Hancock and English. They are regarded as very important acquisitions to the Hancock cause.

BILL BENSON, the newly imported editor, of the Carver Free Press, has already commenced making friends, as the HERALD. If that's your style "pick in."
The grand gathering of the eminent "republican leaders" of the country, met in New York last Thursday, and was a grand affair. It is safe to say that they "saw the handwriting on the wall." It was a solemn gathering with Thurlow Weed and Gen. L.
Freemont at the head.

Gen. U. S. Grant has been elected president of the San Pedro & Canon Delgado Co., which owns over 40,000 acres of land in New Mexico, including copper and gold mines.

Hutchinson Leader.
We are in receipt of the Hutchinson Leader,
a new paper recently established at Hutchinson, McLeod County, by our old army comrade, Cal. P. Smith. The Leader is a five column quarto, neatly printed, and especially devoted to the welfare of the beautiful village of Hutchinson. We hope the citizens of that village will unite "as a man" and give the Leader the support it deserves.

State and Congressional Population.

The population of the State, as shown by the state census, is 776,714, or an increase of 362,044, in ten years. The returns also show that, on a basis of 160,000 people as the ratio of congressional representation,
the state will be entitled to two more congressmen after 1880.

The population of the three congressional districts is as follows: First district, 231,- 836; second, 226,894; third, 317,984. The third district will probably be divided, and another district will be carved out of the first and second.

Cheap School Books.

The people of Minnesota will be called upon at the coming election to vote upon the State text-book law, and to decide whether they will continue to enjoy cheap school books, or take their chances for a combination which formerly made text books cost twice as much as they do now.
—Pioneer Press.

We believe the people of Carver County will vote almost unanimously to retain the present "cheap school book" law, notwithstanding the protest of book agents all over the State. We have a good thing and know how to keep it.

Henry Poshler, M.C., has given notice that he has the appointment of a cadet to West Point from his district, and states that a competitive examination of all applicants will be held, by a committee appointed for that purpose, at St. Peter, at 10 o'clock, on the 9th day of September, 1880, at which time a cadet and alternate will be selected. The candidate must be not less than seventeen years of age nor more than twenty-two years; must pass a satisfactory physical examination, and also in the common branches, including the history of the United States.

Pay of Enumerators.

We are informed that the different census enumerators in this district, will receive their pay within the next two weeks.
Duplicate receipts will be sent them to sign shortly, after which they will receive their check.

How J. A. Garfield, republican candidate has been "swinging around the circle" from Ohio to New York, and addressing the visiting multitude at each stopping place in the swing. Sunday he stopped at the "Sunday Camp Meeting Ground" in New York to rest.

Hancock's old army comrades are rallying to his support by thousands. In Philadelphia alone there are no less than twenty Hancock clubs, numbering in the aggregate five thousand men, all of whom have heretofore been active members of the Republican party. Pennsylvania will see to it that her favorite son is not left in the lurch.—GLOBE.

THE NEED OF CHANGE.

A long and unchecked possession of power
by any party leads to extravagance, corruption and loose practices. After twenty years of domination by the Republicans chronic abuse has become fastened on the public service like barnacles on the bottom of a stranded ship. There is no hope of reform by leaders who have created a system of maladministration and who are interested in perpetuating its evils. Nothing short of the sternest remedy gives any promise of effective reform, and the first step toward it is a change of rulers. The government must be got out of the ruts in which it has too long been run. New blood must be infused in the management of public affairs before relief can be expected. The people demand a change, and being in earnest, are likely to be gratified.

Very sincerely,
DAVID DAVIS.

City.

Lakotown Thoughts.

Early to bed and early to rise in the best way to escape our Lakotown ills.
Champhor gun placed on shelves or in drawers, will effectually drive away mice.
The evenings and mornings are delightfully cool and pleasant, now.

Soil for celery should be rich and moist.
Can't be too highly manured.

Be careful what you eat, how you eat,
and when you eat.

Fishing is a very exhilarating sport here, in summer time. If the sunny creatures won't bite, the mosquitoes will.—Last July were the days when a fellow felt like doing nothing, and keeping at it.
The great question last July was—"Is it hot enough for you?"

Brown faces and arms were fashionable here during harvest time.
A citizen, here, complains that he can't keep a collar clean more than one day.
He wants a remedy. Wash your neck.
Gottlieb Meitzold's stone house was first one built, of kind, here, if not first one in Co. At least, so says Mr. Meitzold.

Emanuel Hoyer, a son of Rev. Jacob Hoyer, is with John Rippe, Jr., as a farm hand, and likes it very well.

hereabouts to begin harvesting, and prospects for a fair crop of oats and wheat,

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Judge David Davis' endorsement of Hancock.
The following letter was given to the press Sunday evening:
BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Aug. 4.—MY DEAR
SIR: The training and habits of my life naturally lead me to prefer civilians to soldiers for the great civil trust; but as parties are organized, voters must choose between the candidates they present or must stand aloof, indifferent or neutral, with no good citizen ought to do at a Presidential election. I have no hesitation in supporting Hancock for the best of all reasons, to my mind, because his election will put an end to sectional strife and sectional parties, and will

REVIVE A PATRIOTIC SENTIMENT
all over the land, which political leaders and factions for sinister ends have sought to prevent. There can be no permanent prosperity without pacification. Great as were the achievements of Gen. Hancock in war, his conduct in peace, when in command of Louisiana and Texas, in 1867, was still greater, and justly commends him to the confidence of the country. That was a time when passion ruled in the public councils, and military power was exerted to silence civil authority. The temptation was strong to sail with the rushing current, for an inflated partisan opinion was too ready to condone excesses and to applaud oppression.

GEN. HANCOCK ORDER NO. 40, in assuming charge of the Fifth military district, announced that the right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, the freedom of speech, the natural rights of persons and the rights of property, must be respected. These principles are the basis of free government, and the proclamation of them by Gen.
Hancock stands out in striking contrast with the action of his superior, who soon after rebuked and drove him from the command for uttering sentiments worthy of a soldier. The soldier, clothed with extraordinary power, voluntarily uncovered before the civil authority, sheathed his sword, testified his fidelity to the constitution,

and sets an example of obedience to law which will pass into history as his soundest claim to distinction. The man who, in the midst of the excitement of that stormy period, was cool enough to see his duty clearly, and courageous enough to execute it firmly, may be

TRUSTED IN ANY CRISIS.

His letter to General Sherman, recently brought to light, lifts Gen. Hancock far above the past appreciation of his civil ability. It marks him as one of the wisest of his time, with a statesman's grasp of mind and the integrity of a patriot whom no sense of expediency could swerve from his honest convictions.

ENGLISH HISTORY.

BY CLEM ALDOUS.

Eight round centuries have rolled away since the coronation of William the Conqueror. During the years which have intervened since then, thirty-five "crown-heads" have sat upon the throne of England, making an average duration of about twenty-three. There were eight Henrys, six Edwards, four Georges; four Williams, three Richards, two Jameses, two Charleses, one Stephen, one John, one Mary, one Elizabeth, one Anne, one Victoria. Of this number, fourteen reposed beneath the spires of Westminster and the remainder lie buried in thirteen different places. The longest reign was that of George III., who ruled fifty-nine years three months and five days; the shortest was that of Edward V., two months and thirteen days. George III. reached the advanced age of 82; Edward V. was murdered in his 13th year. Ten reached the age of 60. The Georges were a long-lived family; George I. lived to be 67; George II., 77; George III., 82.

While it has with reason been maintained that "the desire for gain is the strongest impulse of the human heart," it is at the same time true that the love of money is fostered only for the power which it brings to its possessor. So, it may be argued that "the love of fame is the universal passion of mankind," and the gratification of this desire, when uncontrolled by reason and conscience, will lead to the having of any danger or the commission of any crime.

How like a mountain devil to the heart flits the unbridled ambition! Let it once play the monarch, and its heavenly brow glows with a beauty that bewitches thought and undresses peace forever.

No more striking illustration of this fact is shown than in the history of England's monarchs. Whatever there may be to illuminate the past, England can point with anything but pride to the character and conduct of her sovereigns.

King John, who murdered Prince Arthur in order that his title might be more secure, led so wicked and licentious a life that historians have seen fit to mention the fact: "He left two illegitimate sons, Henry and Richard," says one writer: "It is hard to say whether his conduct to his father, his brother, his nephews or his subjects was most culpable. Covetousness, levity, licentiousness, ingratitude, treachery, tyranny and cruelty characterize his reign."

The pretended usurpation of the crown by Henry VI. inaugurated that fatal quarrel between the "House of York" and the "House of Lancaster," which lasted for thirty years, and which is recognized to have cost the lives of eighty Princes of the blood and almost entirely annihilated the ancient nobility of England.

Richard III., in order to pave his way to the throne, assisted in the assassination of King Henry VI. and his only son, became necessary to the murder of his own brother, Duke of Clarence, and, after having been intrusted with the regency of the kingdom, secretly destroyed his two young nephews, Edward, Prince of Wales, and Richard, Duke of York.

Being proclaimed King, he married Anne, widow of the murdered Prince, and afterward, finding her an obstacle to his ambition, he is accredited with having "carried her off by poison."

The reign of Henry VIII., which began under the most favorable auspices and led fair to be one of wisdom and justice, degenerated into the blackest tyranny.

Mounting the throne at the age of 18, with a reputation for talents and learning rare in one so young, he squandered the immense treasures of his predecessor, and turned his attention to the pursuit of literature to the aggrandizement of his own glory and the exercise of an arbitrary and unjust power. Having become enamored of Anne Boleyn, maid of honor to the Queen, he discarded his wife, Catherine of Aragon, and secretly married Anne. But the unfortunate Anne, having accepted the offers of royalty upon such terms, was at the mercy of a man who had no scruples regarding either her welfare or his own honor. Her life was in his hands, and she was secure only so long as his fickle mind was not tempted by new conquests. His affections, or rather passions, were soon transferred to Jane Seymour, daughter of Sir John Seymour, and, in order that he might gratify his new flame, Henry had Anne Boleyn beheaded, and the day after celebrated his nuptials with Jane. Jane Seymour lived but a short time, and immediately after her death the King formed an alliance with Anne of Cleves, daughter of the Duke of Cleves, and proving distasteful to Henry he divorced Anne, and upon the most trivial pretext brought Cromwell to the block for having involved him in so much trouble.

Having entered a new passion for Catherine Howard, niece to the Duke of Norfolk, and finding no obstacle in his way, he raised Catherine to his throne. But the turbulent stream was only quiet for the passing moment. Subsequent developments brought to light the fact that the Queen was false to her marriage vow, and, as the price of faithfulness, she was required to expire her guilt upon the block.

A few years later Henry married Catherine Parr, widow of Lord Latimer, "a woman of virtue, and somewhat inclined to the reformed doctrines." Being in secret sympathy with "the new religion," and having at one time incurred the King's displeasure, it was by the merest accident, combined with a woman's artifice, that she managed to escape the scaffold for having presumed to entertain religious views contrary to those of her husband; and, though the Queen herself escaped, yet Anne Ascue, "a young lady of merit, as well as beauty," through whose secrecy and fidelity the Queen's life was preserved, in company with three others, were burned at the stake.

He at one time suppressed 376 monasteries, and confiscated their entire revenue, amounting to £32,000 ($160,000) a year.

Cardinal Wolsey, Fisher, Bishop of Rochester, Sir Thomas Moore, Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Surrey, and Cromwell, are a few of the number who rendered Henry the greatest of service, and were afterward beheaded at his instigation. He, at another time, through intrigue, induced the monks and abbots to resign their houses, and the revenue of these establishments, amounting to £161,000 ($805,000), became the plunder of the King. One historian says of him: "A catalogue of this Prince's vices would comprise many of the worst qualities incidental to human nature." Which is, for the least, "drawing it mildly."

The character of Henry VIII. is the more detestable from the fact that his atrocities were, in many instances, both inhuman and unnecessary. Assuming the reins of government at a time when there was a popular clamor for a change in the administration, his accession to the throne met with universal satisfaction. Inheriting an undisputed title, he was not, like John or Richard III., compelled to rule with an iron hand in order to maintain an authority which no one questioned.

Queen Mary, coming immediately after her father was well calculated to conduct a reign of terror, which had been inaugurated by Henry VIII. She removed the mask from her real character by the villainous execution of Lady Jane Grey and her husband Lord Guildford Dudley, for having been persuaded to accept the offer of a throne that was willed to her by a legal heir.

This perished at the early age of 18 one of the most talented and amiable martyrs that ever became the victim of political intrigue or treachery. "In the space of three years it is computed that 277 persons were brought to the stake. Among those who suffered by fire were five Bishops, twenty-one clergymen, eight lay-gentlemen, eighty-four tradesmen, 100 husbandmen, servants and laborers, fifty-five women, and four children."

It is difficult to discern any redeeming qualities in the character of Mary, while her treachery and cruelty were only equalled by her unbounded devotion to the principles of papacy.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

CUPCAKES.—Two cups sugar, one cup butter, three eggs, three cups flour, one cup sweet milk, a small teaspoonful of cinnamon and nutmeg; mix smoothly, roll and cut in any design, and bake in hot oven.

VANILLA SAUCE FOR BOILED PUDDING.—Scald one-half pint of rich milk or cream; then add the yolks of two well-beaten eggs and one-half pint of sugar; stir until it is as thick as boiled custard. When cool flavor with vanilla. Just before serving add the whites of the eggs, beaten stiff, and gently stir in the sauce.

NEW ENGLAND MEERFINS.—Beat two eggs well, with a tablespoonful of butter; add a pint of milk. Take three teaspoons of flour, two teaspoons of baking powder, and half a teaspoonful of salt; sift into the milk and eggs, beat quickly, and drop into muffin-rings or gem-pans, leaving room for them to rise; bake immediately in a quick oven.

CUP CAKE.—Sift three cups of flour with three small teaspoons of baking powder in a large dish; break three eggs into a pan—beat well; then add one and a half cups of granulated sugar, half a cup of soft butter; stir all till light and creamy; then add one cupful of milk; stir a few times; now gradually add the flour; beat well; flavor with lemon or almond; this will make two cakes; throw a cupful of stoned raisins into one.

PINEAPPLE TART.—Take one pineapple, pare and carefully remove all specks; measure and take the same quantity in sugar and half the quantity in butter, one cup of cream, five eggs; stir butter and sugar to a cream and add to the pineapple, previously grated; then add the eggs, well beaten, and the cream. Line your pie-plates with a good crust, and bake to a light brown in a moderate oven.

CURRANT BREAD.—Pick and wash your currants; mash them with a wooden spoon in the preserving-kettle, and let them simmer for ten minutes after they have come to a boil; then strain through a flannel bag, and add to every pint of juice a pound of brown sugar; boil rapidly for ten or fifteen minutes, skimming the sirup; put in glasses while hot, but do not close them till the jelly is perfectly cold.

BROWN BREAD.—Three and a half cups of Graham flour; two cups of Indian meal; two-thirds of a cup of sirup; one pint of milk; one pint of water, or, if you have not plenty of milk, use all water; one teaspoonful of saleratus and one teaspoonful of salt. Steam four hours. It is excellent. I always make it to eat with baked beans. My husband thinks it is better than the famous Boston brown bread. —Mrs. P. C. C., in Rural New Yorker.

PAUL KUNKEL, who died a natural death at York, Pa., a few days ago, came dangerously near being hanged in 1854. A stranger begged a lodging at his house, and departed in the morning, leaving behind an umbrella and a pair of slippers. These were identified as belonging to a woman who had been robbed and murdered. Kunkel was indicted as the murderer, and his guilt was a foregone conclusion with most persons, nobody believing his story of the lodger. But in the nick of time the real criminal was discovered.

The census shows that several Massachusetts cities beside Boston have made rapid gains in population. Lowell, which in 1870 had 41,000, now has about 60,000. Lawrence has advanced in ten years from 28,921 to 38,500, and Lynn from 28,330 to nearly 40,000. Boston shows an increase of 100,000. The increase in the cities and manufacturing towns has not been made at the expense of the country towns and villages, which seem to hold their own.

They Boston and New York boats have long had a war of cutting fares. From Boston to New York is $1, while from Boston to Newport—not half way—the fare is $1.60. Once upon a time Mr. Ward McAllister, a Harvard law student, had occasion to go to Newport. Now, strange as it may appear, this particular law student had not a superfluous penny, although it is a well-known fact that law students generally are very frugal.

So Mr. McAllister bought a ticket to New York, intending quietly and unobtrusively to get off at Newport. But here the mighty arm of the railroad company was stretched out and the McAllister was not allowed to get off until he had paid 60 cents extra. This was the way he paid for riding on the cars, but that he is not obliged to pay for getting off where he pleases. So the economical McAllister not only got his ride to Newport for $1, but he has been awarded $75 and costs for doing so. The costs amount to $125.

WHAT CAN IT BE?

He never spoke of love, but oft his eyes
With quiet, earnest meanings rest on me,
While a chance meeting seems a glad surprise—
Of it he never told, what can it be?
Sometimes he sits silent, when, if I speak,
The quick response comes low and thrillingly;
He reads my thought instinctive on my cheek—
Of it he never told, what can it be?
Searching my soul, he claims it joy to find Tastes, feelings, hopes, all with his own agree,
And asks what more heart unto heart can bind—
Of it he never told, what can it be?
Last eve when Maud swept by with queenly air,
The jewels flashing on her forehead fair,
"Steeple," he said, "the wild rose in your hair!"
Of it he never told, what can it be?
As by a shining gem, at twilight dim,
I set and wait until he turns the key;
When will he open? If he not love with him,
Of my sick heart, 'tis life dead with me!

A STRANGE story of second sight is told at Saltsby, Ky. The Rev. Mr. Vaughn, Judge Durham, and several respectable Colonels vouch for its truth. It is to the effect that Mrs. Foster was ill and part of the time delirious. When out of her head, one night, she said two negroes were setting fire to a certain building; that she plainly saw them pouring coal oil on some buildings, and preparing to light it. No heed was paid to her ravings. A few minutes afterward the watchers in the room heard an alarm of fire. The flames had been discovered at the very time and place of which Mrs. Foster had spoken.

STEPHEN ALLEN was so ill at Jacksonport, Miss., that he could hardly stir in bed, when he was told that Henry Melville was on his way there to kill him. Melville was known to be desperate and vindictive, and there was good reason to fear that he would carry out his threat. Allen told his young son to stand at the door and endeavor to dissuade Melville from his purpose. The boy begged the assassin not to murder a defenseless invalid, but he forced his way in, drew a knife, seized the sick man by the throat, and raised his weapon to strike. Just then Allen feebly protruded a pistol from under the bed-clothes and shot his assailant dead.

IMPURE BLOOD,
A torpid liver and dyspepsia cause morose-
ness and irritability, and the mind becomes dull and cloudy. Persons suffering in this way are unfit for the ordinary pursuits and pleasures of life.
ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS is the most powerful Blood Purifier and Tonic
known, and it at the same time builds up
and fortifies the system, invigorates the
liver, aids digestion and cures dyspepsia.
It is fast superseding all other medicines
offered for similar purposes. It is composed of barks, roots, seeds, gums and iron.
No remedy has ever gained such wide reputation in so short a time for purifying, tonic-ing up, and reinforcing the whole system, and imparting cheerfulness, vivacity and buoyancy of spirits, as the sovereign remedy.

Here and There.
It's cool and nice.
Stacking is about over in this vicinity.
We'll soon hear the "hum" of the thresher.
Plowing is next in order. Good plowing is necessary to ensure a good harvest.
Harvest "bills and picnics" will soon be in order. They generally follow a good harvest in this vicinity.
Chaska has built nearly a half mile of side walk this summer. A pretty good showing for a small city like Chaska.
The board of equalization meets to-morrow, to finish up equalizing.
The County board, meets for general business Aug. 30. Remember the date.
Gerhard Schroers is doing a big business in the sewing machine line. The Wheeler and Wilson, is a general favorite.
Workmen are busily engaged on the addition of the Catholic Parsonage.
We are glad to hear that the Rev. Father Wendlin, formerly stationed here over the Catholic Church, has entirely recovered from his late sickness.
Several families who desired to locate in Chaska, were obliged to leave town on account of being unable to secure tenement houses. Mr. Eimann and family, have taken up their residence in Norwood.
Fishing excursions are the order of the day, and parties meet with unusual success this year.
Gottlieb Eder, has "ice cream" every Sunday and his parlors are crowded all day. He also receives fresh fruits every day. Call and see.
Wm. Seeger and Son, of the Chaska elevator, constantly keep on hand corn meal and Graham flour. Leave them your order and it will be promptly delivered.
Matt Logelin, met with a painful accident last Monday, while unloading a car load of dimension lumber. A piece acci-dently struck him on the side of the head inflicting a painful wound.
Go to Mike Hammer, if you want a single or double harness, he sells them cheap.
Ye editor, extends his hearty thanks to our genial Register of Deeds, Mr. Greiner, for a choice basket of garden vegetables. We have been living in clover all week, something new for an editor of a country paper.
The Sargent House.
By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that Judge Sargent, will open his new Hotel, September 1st. Mr.
Sargent has built several additions to his building and now has ample room to accommodate a large number of guests.
Machine belting and lace leather for your thrashing machine can be got at Mike Hammers harness store, 2nd street, Chaska, Minn.
Good Work.
John Schmidt, of this township, purchased a new improved Walter A. Woods Reaper last year of Philip Henk, and cut with that machine, 90 acres of grain last season and 140 this season, and says the machine is still as good as new.
This speaks well for the new Wood Reaper.
DIED.
Mrs. Rademakers, mother of Mrs. T.
Menten, of Young America Township, died last Thursday. She was over 93 years of age. She was buried from the Catholic Church, at Young America, Rev. Father Braun, of Benton, officiating at the ceremonies.
Splendid Building.
The brick work on the new Catholic school building is completed. The roof is also shingled and the cupola on the center of the main building begins to show off to advantage. The building is far enough advanced to indicate how it will look when completed, and the general verdict is, that it will be, a splendid building—a credit to the congregation and our beautiful city.
Public Auction.
Mr. Matthias Ittis, will sell a lot of personal property, on his farm in Chaska, on Friday Aug. 28th. All those wishing to buy stock, should be on hand. See small bills.

The Battle of Chickens.
Our well known sportsmen, Messrs.
Streukens, Odell, Franken and Lewis, have fully completed their arrangements for a grand onslaught on "prairie chickens" on the 15th.
They leave Chaska on a special car on Saturday morning train for Renville Co., and will make Bird Island the rallying point during the campaign. The "community" of the expedition, Mr. Franken, has secured a field tent for sleeping purposes, and has also "put in" a liberal supply of "wet refreshments" to last during their stay. As for the "solids of life," we should judge they intend to rely for the same on their well known "jayhawking proclivities, as they failed to take anything to eat along with them and only a frying pan and 10 "goblets" in the way of camp furniture.

COLLAR SUPPORT.
Mike Hammer, harness dealer, Chaska, is agent for the collar support collar company, of Rochester, Minn. The "Support" is a new patent and is warranted to cure galled horses or "no pay." Mr. H. will sell them on trial and if they do not "cure" in every case will take it back. See illustrated adv. inside page.

PERSONAL.—H. J. Peck, the County Attorney of Scott County, was in town shaking hands with his many old friends on Tuesday.
Jas. Slocum, Esq., of Norwood was in town last Saturday, on his way home from his recent visit to Iowa. He says he had a splendid trip.
R. H. McClelland, city at law, of Jordan, was in town on Tuesday and dropped in to see us.

The Harvest.
The heavy rain storm last Sunday night did considerable damage to lodged grain in the western and northern part of the county. In this vicinity the grain was about all cut and shucked and hence suffered no damage.
The average yield of wheat in this county, will probably not go over 20 bushels to the acre, two thirds of which will grade
No. 1. The harvest will be secured this week.

New Buildings.
Peter Ittis, Esq., is building a two story frame building on the vacant lot south of Gottlieb Eder, on Chestnut Street, which, when completed, will be occupied by Mr.
John Levens, as a harness shop. Enger & Hanson, Builders.
Mr. ——— has the lumber
on the ground for a story and a half frame residence with brick basement. The building will be erected on the lot opposite Mr. Kaufmann's residence, west of the Court House. Mr. Winholz is builder.
The frame for Philip Meyers new residence, is up and almost enclosed. It will be a very neat building when completed.
Mr. M., is building on the lot south of Mr.
Meders wagon shop, on Walnut St. Mr.
Winholz, builder.
L. W. Noble, commenced laying brick on Mr. O. Goodrich's new store last Tuesday, and will have the walls up in a couple of weeks.
Mr. Grates, also commenced work on the Catholic Parsonage, Monday, with a large gang of workmen.
It will be seen from the above list of new buildings in the course of erection, that Chaska is "up and doing," and will,
within a few years, be the leading city in the Minnesota Valley.

Struck by Lightning.
The brick building of Michael Preis, on his farm near Segala Mill, was struck by lightening on Sunday night, and was considerably damaged. A tenement family was occupying the building at the time and the lady of the house was slightly injured by falling debris.
The building has no lightning rod,
hence the accident.
To all wishing a first class rod, we refer them to Mr. Fred Ittis, of Chaska.

Assessed Value of Land.
Below we give the average value of land per acre, including all improvements, in the different townships of Carver County, as equalized by the late board of equalization.
Benton, $11.04
Camden, 7.47
Chaska, 12.44
Chanhassen, 10.52
Carver, 10.40
Dahlgren, 11.21
Hollywood, 8.72
Hancock, 9.97
Lakewood, 10.97
San Francisco, 10.63
Waconia, 10.34
Watertown, 9.78
Young America, 10.08
General average of the County $10.09
per acre.

Mike Hammer, has got a splendid assortment of Trunks and Satchels. Call at his brick store and see his stock.

MARRIED.
At the residence of the bride's parents, in Lakewood, by Rev. W. H. Oerter, in the early part of July, Miss Anna Holmeier to Augustus Lick, Esq. Also, Miss Mary Holmeier, a sister of Anna, to Charles Fairchild, Esq., latter of Minneapolis, this State. All these parties have my best wishes for a long life, much prosperity,
and a due measure of the blessings of life!
J. A. R.

ICE CREAM. LEMONADE AND SWEET CIDER, &c.
Store on Chestnut Street.

A Serious Mistake.
On the 24th day of July last Mrs. Bertha Bierline procured prescriptions for two kinds of medicine from Dr. Dunsmoor of Minneapolis, and took the prescription to be made up at the drug store of Messrs.
Cable & Judd of Minneapolis. Through some mistake the clerk in preparing the medicines got the labels "mixed" as well as the medicines, and upon Mrs. Bierline's return to her home at Chaska, she proceeded to take her medicine in accordance with the directions on the label, and the taking of that medicine astonished her.
In fact it very nearly killed her, inasmuch as it was rank poison, and should never have been used except as a wash.
We understand that Mrs. B., has since the taking of the medicine been in extremely poor health, and that she has been compelled to commence suit against the owners of the drug store.
Democratic County Convention.
Will be held at Waconia on Saturday August 21st, 12 o'clock noon for the purpose of choosing 12 delegates to attend the Democratic Congressional Dist. Convention to be held at LeSueur August 23rd next.
The representation of delegates of the several towns are as follows:
Benton Dahlgren
Carver Hollywood
Chaska Hancock
Chanhassen Lakewood
Camden San Francisco
Waconia Young America
Watertown
A. E. KAEDE,
Chairman Dem. Co. Committee.

FRANK MCKINNEY, formerly of this County, president of a Hancock club, at Blakely, Scott County.

Ten Democrats opened the campaign in Indiana last week, Sen. Hendricks, Vorhees and McDonald, being the principal speakers. They made the "far" fly.

Ten Knight Templars, of the United States, are having a grand time in Chicago this week. It is estimated that over 20,000 visiting Templars are visiting the grand "Triennial." It is estimated that over 200,000 visitors will attend the grand parade and drill on Thursday, to-day.

We are in receipt of the "premium list and rules and regulations of the twenty-second annual State Fair, to be held by the State Agricultural Society at Rochester, on Aug. 30 and 31, Sept. 1, 2, 3 and 4. The premium list is an attractive one, and every indication points to a very successful Fair.

The Daily Transcript, published at Little Falls, Morrison County, Minn., is the latest newspaper venture in Minnesota. The first issue is before us and is a very neat sheet and well filled with editorial and local matters. When it is understood that Little Falls contains less population than Chaska, people will marvel at the possibility of its being self-sustaining. The publisher, Mr. H. C. Stevens, however, announces that sufficient encouragement has been extended him to make the venture a success.

Republican papers in the first district have concluded, that the little difference between Dummell's office holders and the "rank and file" of the republican party of that district, the supporters of WARD, cannot be settled except at the polls next November. We think it will result in the election of a democrat.

P. S. Since writing the above, Mr. Dummell has written an open letter to Mr. Ward, and the people of the 1st District, referring the whole matter in controversy to the election to be decided at the polls in November next. Now you may expect to see the "far fly" as both candidates possess the "sinews of war" and the necessary sand to make an exceedingly lively campaign. In the mean time our democratic friends of that district are longing in their sleeves.

FORNEY ON DEMOCRATS.

Col. John W. Forney, at one time one of the foremost Republicans in this whole country, and in fact, one of the founders of the Republican party, but now an ardent supporter of Gen. Hancock for the presidency, writes to his old paper, the Philadelphia Press, as follows:

"You will not trust Hancock with the Presidency of the United States because he is a Democrat; and yet but for him and such as him the whole nation would have perished. Besides dear friends, we must be careful about this crusade on the Democrats. The true statement regard them as an important factor in our population, and when we attempt to make Democracy a sin we not only forget that Democrats fought in the war for the union with equal courage, but that without the aid of the Democrats, the Republican party would today be shivered into the dry dimensions of the skeleton of known nothingness."

Ward Ready for War.

Hon. W. G. Ward telegraphs the following letter to the Tribune, in reply to Dummell's manifesto. It means war and knife to the hilt. Here is the letter however.

WARSAW, Aug. 17.—Mr. Dummell has closed the door so far as negotiation is concerned in this district. Nothing is left me and my friends but to accept his challenge, which I do with the complete assurance that I will be elected. I am sorry that we cannot settle matters and have but one in the field, but I have done all that can be asked of me to heal the breach. W. G. WARD.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE ON HANCOCK.

The President of the United States, after General Hancock had issued his famous order in Louisiana, sent a copy to Congress, and spoke of it as follows:

"When a great soldier with unrestricted power in his hands to oppress his fellow men, voluntarily foregoes the chance of gratifying his selfish ambition, and devotes himself to the duty of building up the liberties and strengthening the laws of his country, he presents an example of the highest public virtue that human nature has the power of practicing. The strong claim of Washington to be first in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen," is founded on the great fact that in all his illustrious career, he scrupulously abstained from violating the legal and constitutional rights of his fellow citizens. When he surrendered his commission to Congress, the President of that body spoke his highest praise in saying that he had always regarded the rights of the civil authorities through all dangers and disasters." Whenever power above the law courted his acceptance, he calmly put the temptation aside. By such magnanimous acts of forbearance he won the universal admiration of mankind, and left a name which has no rival in the history of the world.

I am far from saying that General Hancock is the only officer of the American army who is influenced by the example of Washington. Doubtless thousands of them are faithfully devoted to the principles for which the men of the Revolution laid down their lives. But the distinguished honor belongs to him of being the first officer in high command South of the Potomac, since the close of the civil war, who has given utterance to these noble sentiments in the form of a military order.

I respectfully suggest to Congress that some public recognition is due, if not to him, to the friends of law and justice throughout the country, such as we are, at such a time, it is but fit that the dignity be vindicated and the virtue proclaimed, so that its value as an example may not be lost to the nation.

Auditor's Office, Carver Co., Minn., Chaska, August 15th 1880.

The county board of equalization met pursuant to adjournment. Members all present, the board was called to order by the clerk.

Resolved, that the Young America mill be reduced $700, for reason the same being out of proportion with other mills.

Resolved, that $140, val. be reduced from the mill of S. J. T. 116 R. 26, for the year 1880, belonging to B. Loventhal, for reason the said land being overvalued.

The application of J. Shaefer for reduction of $100, val. on item 23, personal property in Carver village was rejected by following votes, No. Kugler, Truue and Tiffany; Yes: Hilt and Paulson.

Resolved, that $200, val. be reduced from the 22 personal property in the village of Watertown, belonging to Henry Suter, for reason the said amount being paid, voted in favor, commens. Kugler, Paulson, Tiffany and Truue; against, Hilt.

Resolved, that $850, assessed to Peter Braun of Laketown, on item 21 of personal property, be stricken off for reason the same being annuity.

On motion the board adjourned until 1 o'clock p. m.

One o'clock p. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment, members all present. The board was called to order by the clerk.

Resolved, that the resolution by which $1500, were stricken off from item 22, of personal property of Chas. Peterson of San Francisco be, and the same is hereby rescinded.

Resolved, that $700, be reduced from item 22 of personal property, assessed to Chas. Peterson of San Francisco, for reason the man being old and infirm, and the money on the proceeds thereof being necessary for his support.

Whereas, a petition has been presented to this board, signed by a number of the citizens of the town of Laketown, protesting against the action of this board, in equalizing and classifying the assessed returns of said town to which we would respectfully state, that the action of this board was based upon the following ground: we placed the township of Laketown in the first class on account of its favorable location, and easy access to market; and in raising the said town 115 cents, on improved land, was to bring it up to a certain basis agreed upon by the board of equalization; the said improved lands were returned by the assessor of said town at an average of only $8.37 per acre, instead of from 12 to 15 dollars as agreed upon by the several township assessors; Therefore, thinking that we have acted justly towards the town of Laketown as well as to others, we refuse to entertain said petition. On motion the Co. board of equalization adjourned sine die.

Attest: L. STRUICKENS, Co. Auditor.

Laketown Thoughts.

Our cat market is overstocked. Be careful about indulging in icewater. Bats have been fluttering about after night fall.

Harvest home picnics will soon be in proper order.

Tansy planted around plum trees will prevent ravages of curculio.

The beautiful and exceedingly well arranged flower garden in front of Moravian Parsonage at Zoar is a fine sight. Rev. T. Sonderman takes a great delight in such matters.

Ice tea and coffees are delicious beverages for hot summer days.

In this weather our merciful Laketown farmers should be specially merciful to their horses.

It is said that a horse upon whose legs and neck carbolic soap has been used will not be troubled with flies.

A sponge or damp cloth in the hat would save many who have to work in the sun from being overcome by the heat.

How any man can have the "cheek" to ask favors of the Chaska Valley Herald which he refuses to patronize is one of those things which the philosopher is at a loss to find out. Yet there are men in every community who ask many favors of newspapers which they do not even subscribe for.

On the principle "Honor to whom honor is due," I make following Report for benefit of my Laketown Readers:—Out of the 110 days of school held here by me, last winter, following 14 pupils put in the best attendance; their names, with No. of days in attendance, hereby follow.

Age is in parenthesis.

Albert Maas (8) 105.

William Gerdesen (11) 101 1/2.

Emma Pfister (13) 100.

Mary Gerdesen (5) 99 1/2.

Caroline Holmstrom (11) 99.

Elizabeth Wundt (11) 97.

Emma Zorob (8) 97 1/2.

Ferdinand Klat (7) 98.

Herman Klat (9) 95 1/2.

Alfred Salter (7) 94.

Frank Pfister (9) 93.

Amelia Beise (12) 93 1/2.

Daniel Walter (8) 92.

Anna and Susan Hoehn, children of Henry M., were the most faithful in being "punctual," i. e. on time at 9 a. m. This was also the case the previous winter.

Watertown Items.

Sheriff DuToit paid our burgh a visit one day last week.

Our blacksmiths have been kept more than busy for the past two weeks repairing, they wish harvesting would last much longer.

Most of the farmers are through cutting grain, and with fair weather the present week will have finished stacking. Wheat in some sections here is not as good as was generally supposed.

Although our Cattle Fair held here on Monday 9th came in the midst of harvesting, it was well attended and quite a number of calves made.

Work on the new grist mill is still progressing, and when finished will be one of the finest mills in the County; if nothing prevents the mill will be running in the early part of September.

One of the Helvetia saloon keepers sold liquor on the Sabbath and will try and justify the deed before a jury—at this place to-day.

Since C. G. Halgren has moved into his new building he has added greatly to his stock of goods, and yesterday received a large supply of oil paintings which now adorn the top of the shelving.

BIDS FOR PAINTING.

Bids will be received by the undersigned for painting the new school house, as per specification, on or before Saturday, August 22nd 1880. Right is reserved to reject any or all bids if not satisfactory.

M. ZIMMER.

THE SARGENT HOUSE.

This new hotel, will be open for accommodation of travelers

SEPTEMBER 1, 1880.

DO THE MEER INHERIT THE EARTH?

BY JOHN W. HATTON.
The eagle plucks the raven,
And the raven plucks the jay,
To whose voracious craving
The cricket falls a prey.
The big fish dines at leisure
Upon the smaller fry,
And the minnow eels with pleasure
The poor, unconscious dy.
The miser skims his neighbor,
And the neighbor skims the miser;
And the poor man, doomed to labor,
Spurns the beggar from his door.
And thus the world is preying,
The strong upon the weak,
The greedy upon the meek.
The earth is for the meek.

"WIPE OUT!"

A Thrilling Incident on the Prairie.
What is that?
Look closer, and you will see that it is a gaunt, grim wolf, creeping out of the little grove of cottonwoods toward a buffalo calf gamboling around its mother.
Raise your eyes a little more, and you will see that the prairie around is alive with buffalo. Count them! You might as well try to count the leaves on a giant maple! They are moving foot by foot as they crop the juicy grass, and living waves rise and fall as the herd slowly sweeps on. Afar out to the right and left—mere specks on the plain—are the flankers—old buffaloes, which catch a bite of grass and then sniff the air and scan the horizon for intimation of danger. They are the sentinels of the herd, and right well can they be trusted.
The wolf creeps nearer!
All the afternoon the great herd has fed in peace, and, as it now slowly moves toward the distant river, it is all unconscious that danger is near. Look you well and watch the wolf, for you are going to see such a sight as not one man in 10,000 has ever beheld.

Creep—crawl—skulk—now behind a knoll—now drawing himself over the grass—now raising its head above a thistle to mark the locality of its victim. At a low, slanting, skulking wolf, bone and spirit and treacherous. Wounded or ailing, he has been left to get on as best he may, and his green eyes light up with fierce blaze as he draws nearer to his unconscious prey.
There! No, he is yet too far away. Creep—creep—creep! Now he is twenty feet away—now fifteen, now ten. He hugs the earth, gathers his feet under him, and he bounds through the air as if shot from a gun. He is rolling the calf over and over on the grass in three seconds after he springs.
Now watch!

A cry of pain from the calf—a furious yell from the mother as she wheels and charges the wolf—a startled movement from a dozen of the nearest animals, and a rush begins. The one wolf is magnified into a hundred, the hundred into a thousand. Short, sharp bellows—notes of alarm—a rush, and in fifty seconds after the wolf has wet his fangs with blood that living mass is in motion to get away from an unknown terror.
The waves rise higher and higher as the confusion spreads. One instant it seems as if 10,000 solid acres of prairie were moving bodily away—again waves rise and fall as the cowards behind rush upon those in front who wait to sniff the air and learn the danger. In one minute the alarm runs down the herd to the leaders, further than the eye can see, and the entire herd is going off at a mad gallop, heads down, eyes rolling, and no thought but that of escape. If Lake Erie were to dash itself against a wall the shock would be no greater than the awful crash with which this mass of rattling hoofs, sharp horns and hairy bodies would meet it. The clatter of hoofs and rattle of horns would drown the noise of a stone-paved road.
Ride out on their trail. Here where the stampede began the ground is torn and furrowed as if a thousand cannon had been firing solid shot at targets. Here and there are calves which have been gored or crushed—here and there older animals with broken legs and disabling wounds. Here, where the herd was fairly off, you might as well hunt for a gold dollar as a blade of grass. You look for three miles as you look across it. It is a trail of dirt and dust, and ruts and furrows, where half an hour ago was a carpet of green grass and smiling flowers. The most dreadful cyclone known to man could not have left more horrible scars behind.
Miles away, on the bank of winding, growling river, are three white-topped emigrant wagons. A camp-fire blazes up to boil the kettle—men, women and children stand about, peering over the setting sun at the distant mountains and glad that their journey is almost done. Butterflies come and go on lazy wing—the crickets chirp cheerily in the grass, and the eagles sailing the blue evening air have no warning to give.
Hark! If that thunder?

Men and women turn in their tracks as they look in vain for a cloud in the sky. That rumble comes again as they look into each other's faces. It grows louder as women turn pale and men reach for their trusty rifles. The ground trembles, and air off comes a dim which strikes terror to the heart. "Indians!" they whisper. No! A thousand times better for them if savage Pawnee dashed ride down where these long-barreled rifles could speak in defense of the peaceful camp.
"A stampede of buffaloes!" gasps one of the men as he catches sight of the advance guard under the awful cloud of dust. Rifles are held ready for a shot, and the children climb up in the heavy wagon-wheels to see the strange procession gallop past.

Here they come! Crack! crack! crack! from three rifles, and a shout as each bullet tells. Next instant a shaggy head, followed by a dust-brown body, rushes through the camp. Then another and another. The men shout and wave their arms—the women and children turn pale yet.

The roar and din shut out every other sound, and the wagons jar and tremble with the concussion. Now another shaggy head—another—half a dozen—a score—a hundred—a great living wave which sweeps along with the power of a tornado, followed by others more fierce and strong, and the camp is blotted off the earth more completely than by any power of Heaven. Nothing to be seen—no shout to be heard. Wave followed wave across the spot—over the bank—into the stream and across, and when the last of the herd has passed the keenest hunter can find nothing on that spot of wood or iron or cloth or bone or flesh to prove that a dozen men, women and children were there wiped out of existence and reduced to shred and dust.

AN EXTRAORDINARY TRAGEDY.

This morning the great Lambton Mills tragedy was concluded by the suicide in his cell of Robert DeCourcier, the fratricide. He was to have been hung tomorrow, and this last act of the terrible drama has produced a profound sensation.
The story of the crime is as follows: Robert and Edward DeCourcier were brothers, and lived together on a farm at Lambton Mills, near here. Both were magnificently proportioned, wonderfully handsome, and popular. Robert was the finer-looking of the two—over six feet high, with dark, wavy auburn hair; heavy, drooping mustache, a noble countenance and commanding presence. The brothers disagreed about money matters, and separated, Robert removing to a distant town, leaving Miss Mary Mills, the belle of the country side, with a promise that he would soon return and make her his bride.
Then Edward began the devilish work which ended in the disgrace of the lady and the death of himself and brother. So deep-rooted was his hatred of his brother that by forged letters, unblinking lies and protestations of love, Edward persuaded Miss Mills to forsake his brother and engage herself to him. He seduced her, and shortly before her confinement, when her shame was generally known, he wrote to his brother Robert to come home and he could have his girl if he wanted her.
Robert suspected nothing, and, having been deeply enamored of Miss Mills, returned at once, only to find her in the agonies of childbirth, while the satanic brother was boasting on the streets that he had won the girl and the child if he wanted them. On the same day he caused an execution to be served on Robert's property for an alleged debt.
Robert, crazed with rage and shame, rushed to the village drug store, bought arsenic, and, borrowing a double-barreled shot-gun, started toward his brother's wagon factory. Meeting his brother, he emptied both loads into his body, took the poison himself, ran into the shop, closed the door and set fire to the shelves, hoping to burn himself and the premises. He was promptly rescued, though badly burned, and an antidote given, which saved his life. Edward never breathed after being shot.
At Robert's trial he was convicted of murder and sentenced to death. Every effort was made to have the sentence commuted, but in vain. Petitions signed by thousands were sent to the Minister of Justice; clergymen implored Princess Louise to intercede, and personally begged the Minister of Justice to be merciful. The prisoner, who had been very sanguine, was informed that the last hope had vanished. He was terribly shocked, but seemed to become resigned. Special guards have been over him ever since his condemnation to prevent suicide, but this morning he drank from a water-pitcher and fell dead—poisoned with prussic acid.—Toronto Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

AGRARIAN CRIME IN IRELAND.

There has been issued a return of all agrarian outrages which have been reported by the Royal Irish Constabulary between Jan. 1, 1879, and Jan. 31, 1880, giving particulars of the crime, arrests, and results of proceedings. In the Province of Leinster, during the period named, there were 153 agrarian outrages; in 5 cases the offenders were convicted, in 13 they were made amenable but not convicted, and in 138 the offenders were neither convicted nor made amenable. In Munster there were 184 cases of outrage; in 16 the offenders were convicted, and in 13 they were made amenable, but not convicted; in 7 they are awaiting trial, and in 112 they have escaped being either convicted or made amenable. In the Province of Ulster there were 137 cases, in 20 of which convictions were obtained. In 9 cases the offenders were made amenable, but not convicted, 3 await trial, and in 95 the offenders were neither convicted nor made amenable. In Connaught there were 554 cases of outrage, in only 28 of which were convictions obtained. In 30 the offenders were made amenable, though not convicted; 28 cases await trial, and in 498 the offenders were neither convicted nor made amenable. So that, out of a total of 977 cases, offenders in 804 have escaped conviction or being made amenable, while in only 69 have they been convicted, and in 65 made amenable. The smallest number of offenses committed in any particular month was 29 in February, and the largest, 167, in November, 1879.—London Standard.

The library of the late Dr. Kenealey, which was one of the richest private collections in England, and included many rare and valuable works in the classic and in Oriental literature, has been divided between the British Museum and St. John's College, Dublin.

A GREAT deal of trouble is being experienced with the rags which have recently reached this country from Europe. A great portion of them are reported to be almost worthless. Out of one lot of 400 bales, which recently arrived at New York, only 100 bales were fit for use for paper making.

"Do you say I've been a hard drinker all my life?" said an old toper to an acquaintance. "Yes, I do." "Well, there's where you're mistaken. At one period I didn't touch a drop for two years—in fact I drank nothing but milk." "Indeed! What two years was that?"

"My first two."
A RAZOR hone has been established in Springfield, Mass. All persons afflicted in body or mind who have faith enough to believe that they can receive physical or spiritual help are welcome there, and the healing is secured through the prayer of faith, the laying-on of hands, and sometimes anointing with oil.

As Illinois woman went into the show business on a small scale with a bogus petrified bany, which she wheeled from town to town in a perambulator, telling a story of its sickness, death, and final transformation into stone. The figure had been well made as to the head and arms, but plain marks of the chisel were found elsewhere.

JOHN MEADOWS' parents consented to his marrying Miss Finner, at Memphis, and all the preparations were made for a fine wedding. Two days before the wedding, however, they found out that her golden hair had been made so by bleaching. Regarding that as a deception, they forbade the banns, and the son obediently broke his engagement.

The Rev. Dr. Childs, of Hartford, desired to bury the body of a colored girl, who had been a servant in his family, in a Cedar Hill Cemetery lot, of which he was part owner. The Secretary refused permission, and the interment was made elsewhere. Dr. Childs said that the exclusion was on account of color. The Secretary makes the excuse that the permission of the other owners of the lot had not been obtained.

It was a lean little spring chicken, worth about 30 cents, that strayed from the Hammersmith's yard at Madison, Ind., into the Smiths' yard. Mrs. Hammersmith went to get the fowl, and Smith would not let her have it. Hammersmith attempted to whip Smith, who retreated into the house. Hammersmith and his wife then threw stones at the house, and Smith fired out with gun, killing the husband.

In China the names of children are given according to circumstances associated with the time of their birth. If a child is born at midnight, its name may be "Midnight"; if birth occurs on the birthday of some relative, that relative's name may be the name of the new-born, and so there are names of Thirty, Fifty, One, and other numbers. But there are even more curious names. If the parents desired a boy, and a girl is born, her name may be "Ought-to-be-a-Boy."

RUSSIA and Germany are complaining of a rag famine. The St. Petersburg Herald states that during the Russo-Russian war, and since then in consequence of the plague, rag-picking has been very much diminished in Russia; that the many fires have destroyed large quantities of rags, and that, as a general thing, the wearing of cotton fabrics more and more supersedes the use of linen in Russia, thus causing a growing scarcity of the more-desirable class of rags.

A SPEED of seventy-three miles per hour was attained some years since by the locomotives of the London and Northwestern railroad, of England, and since that time a far greater rate of speed has been attained by the locomotives of the celebrated tidal train, Wild Irishman, between Holyhead and London. A speed of sixty-four miles has been reached by the engines of the London and Southeastern railroad, the engine drawing at the time a weight of over twenty tons.

ALLEN KERRY was a good-looking boy of 14, at Westfield, Mass. He dressed himself in his sister's clothes, ran away in them to Springfield, and got employment as a salesgirl in a bookstore. He made such a winsome girl, and flirted so naturally with the male customers, that he soon became a great attraction at the place. He was a favorite, too, with the girls of the house where he boarded, and none of them suspected that he had no right to wear petticoats. His mother at length discovered and exposed him.

OUR JUVENILES.

Grandpa's Barn.
Oh, a jolly old place is grandpa's barn,
Where the doors stand open thro'out the day,
And the cooling doves fly in and out,
And the air is sweet with the fragrant hay.

Where the grain lies over the slippery floor,
And the hens are busily looking around,
And the sunbeams flicker, now here, now there,
And the breeze blows through with a merry sound.

The swallows twitter and chirp all day,
With fluttering wings, in the old brown eaves,
And the robins sing in the trees which lean
To brush the roof with their rustling leaves.

Oh for the glad vacation time,
When grandpa's barn will echo the about
The merry children, who romp and play
In the new-born freedom of "school let out."

Such scolding of doves from their cozy nests,
Such hunting for eggs in the loft so high,
Till the frightened hens, with a cackle shrill,
From their hidden treasures are fain to fly.

Oh, the dear old barn, so cool, so white!
Its doors will open again ere long
To the summer sunshine, the new-mown hay,
And the merry ring of vacation song.

For grandpa's barn is the jolliest place
For frolic and fun on a summer day;
And even old time, as the years pass by,
Its memory never can steal away.

The Drummer-Boy.

One cold December morning about eighty years ago, a party of tourists were crossing the Alps—and a pretty large party, too, for there were several thousands of them together. Some were riding, some walking, and most of them had knapsacks on their shoulders, like many Alpine tourists nowadays. But instead of being sticks they carried muskets and bayonets, and dragged along with them some fifty or sixty cannon.

In fact, these tourists were nothing less than a French army; and a very hard time of it they seemed to be having. Trying work, certainly, even for the strongest man, to wade for miles through knee-deep snow in this bitter frost and biting wind, along these narrow, slippery mountain paths, with precipices hundreds of feet deep all round. The soldiers looked thin and heavy-eyed for want of food and sleep, and the poor horses that were dragging the heavy guns stumbled at every step.

But there was one among them who seemed quite to enjoy the rough marching, and tramped along with the deep snow and cold, gray mist, through which the great mountain peaks overhead loomed like shadowy giants, as merrily as if we were going to a picnic. This was a little drummer-boy of 10 years old, whose fresh, rosy face looked very bright and pretty among the grim, scarred visages of the old soldiers.

When the cutting wind whirled a shower of snow in his face he dashed it away with a cheery laugh, and awoke all the echoes with the lively rattle of his drum, till it seemed as if the huge black rocks around were all singing in chorus.

"Bravo, Petit Tambour!" (little drummer) cried a tall man in a shabby gray cloak, who was marching at the head of the line with a long pole in his hand, and striking it into the snow every now and then to see how deep it was. "Bravo, Pierre, my boy! With such music as that one could march all the way to Moscow."

The boy smiled, and raised his hand to his cap in salute, for this rough-looking man was no other than the General himself, "Fighting Macdonald," one of the bravest soldiers in France, of whom his men used to say that one sight of his face in battle was worth a whole regiment.

"Long live our General!" shouted a hoarse voice; and the cheer, flying from mouth to mouth, rolled along the silent mountains like a peal of distant thunder. But his echo had hardly died away when the silence was again broken by another sound of a very different kind—a strange, uncanny sort of whispering far away up the great white mountain-side. Moment by moment it grew louder and harsher, till at length it swelled into a deep, hoarse roar.

"Your faces, lads!" roared the General; "it's an avalanche!"
But before his men had time to obey, the ruin was upon them. Down thundered the great mass of snow, sweeping the narrow ledge-path like a water-fall, and crashing down along with it came heaps of stone and gravel and loose earth, and uprooted bushes and great blocks of cold blue ice. For a moment all was dark as night; and, when the rush had past, many of the brave fellows who had been standing on the path were nowhere to be seen. They had been carried down over the precipice, and either killed or buried alive in the snow.

But the first thought of their comrades was not for them. When it was seen what had happened, one cry arose from every mouth:
"Where's our Pierre? Where's our little drummer?"

Where, indeed? Look which way they would, nothing was to be seen of their poor little favorite, and, when they shouted his name, there was no answer. Then there broke forth a terrible cry of grief, and many a hard old soldier, who had looked without flinching at a line of leveled muskets, felt the tears start into his eyes at the thought that that bright face would never be seen among them again.

But all at once, far below them, out of the shadow of the black, unknown gulf that lay beneath those tremendous rocks, arose the faint roll of a drum, beating the charge. The soldiers started, and bent eagerly forward to listen; then up went a shout that shook the air.
"He's alive, comrades! our Pierre's alive, after all!"

And beating his drum still, like a brave lad! He wanted to have the old music to the last!
"But we must save him, lads, or he'll freeze to death down there. He must be saved!"

"He shall be!" broke in a deep voice from behind, and the General himself was seen standing on the brink of the precipice, throwing off his cloak.

"No, no, General!" cried the grenadiers, with one voice; "you mustn't run such a risk as that. Let one of us go instead; your life is worth more than all of ours put together."

"My soldiers are my children," answered Macdonald quietly, "and no father grudges his own life to save his son."

The soldiers knew better than to make any more objections. They obeyed in silence, and the General was swinging in mid-air, down, down, till he vanished at last into the darkness of the cold black depth below.

Then every man drew a long breath, and all eyes were strained to watch for the first sign of his appearing; for they knew well that he would never come back without the boy, and that the chance was terribly against him.

Meanwhile Macdonald, having landed safely at the foot of the precipice, was looking anxiously round in search of Pierre; but the beating of the drum had ceased, and he had nothing to guide him.

"Pierre!" shouted he as loud as he could, "where are you, my boy?"
"Here, General," answered a weak voice, so faint that he could barely distinguish it.

And there, sure enough, was the little fellow's curly head, half buried in a huge mound of snow, which alone had saved him from being dashed to pieces against the rocks as he fell. Macdonald made him look at once; and, although he sank waist-deep at every step, reached the spot at last.

"All right now, my brave boy," said the General, cheerily. "Put your arms round my neck, and hold tight; we'll have you out of this in a minute."
The child tried to obey, but his stiffened fingers had lost all their strength; and even when Macdonald himself clasped the tiny arms about his neck their hold gave way directly.

What was to be done? A few minutes more, and the numbing colds of that dismal place would make the rescuer as powerless as him whom he came to rescue. But Gen. Macdonald was not the man to be so easily beaten. Tearing off his sash, and knotting one end of it to the rope, he bound Pierre and himself firmly together with the other, and then gave the signal to draw up.

And when the two came swinging up into the daylight once more, and the old soldiers saw their pet still alive and unhurt, cheer upon cheer rang out, rolling far back along the line, till the very mountains themselves seemed to be rejoicing.

"We've been under fire and under snow together," said Macdonald, chafing the boy's cold hands tenderly, "and nothing shall part us two after this, so long as we both live."

And the General kept his word. Years later, when the great war were all over, there might be seen walking in the garden of a quiet country house in the South of France a stooping, white-haired old man, who had once been the famous Marshal Macdonald; and he leaned for support upon the arm of a tall, black-mustached, soldier-like fellow, who had once been little Pierre, the drummer.

CHINA AS A MILITARY POWER.

It is not customary to look upon the Chinese empire, with its 300,000,000 of people, as at all formidable in war. The celerity with which Great Britain forced the use of opium upon that nation gave us all a very poor opinion of Celestial prowess. That was a war of noise versus cold lead. It was gone against guns. John Chinaman had no conception of the military ways of John Bull.

But that was several years ago, and hardly had peace reigned at Hong Kong before the prudent Chinese Government set about getting ready for future contingencies. A careful study was made of foreign civilization, not with a view to improvement, but simply of defense.

China had no more idea of becoming Occidental than a hunter has of becoming a wild beast. Finding it necessary to protect itself against powerful barbarians, the Government determined to learn all about war as carried on by the barbarians. Industrious purchasing this course, China has supplied itself with a very respectable navy—some twenty gun-boats, manned by foreigners, and any number of native men-of-war. The soldiers are armed with the latest breech-loading rifles, bought largely in this country.

KITE-FLYING EXTRAORDINARY.

Kite-flying is an expensive recreation in Bodie. A saloon-keeper of that mining center recently made a kite of a $500 plate glass, 6x10 bar-room mirror, tying it to a string of demijohns and brown jugs for a tail. The novel kite went up with a rush, and, reflecting the rays of the sun, dazzled the eyes of all who beheld it. Its focus extended as far as Mammoth, where a hay-stack was set on fire by concentration of the sun's rays. The inhabitants of the latter place were greatly alarmed at the singular object in the heavens, one correspondent having compared it to "a ball of condensed lightning." Unfortunately the saloon-keeper's stock of jugs and demijohns was not large enough to supply the necessary counterpoise to a heavy mirror, and, after ascending to a great height, with amazing rapidity, it suddenly turned and fell with a crash to the earth, breaking it into a thousand fragments. The whistling of the wind in the jugs and demijohns made a peculiar sort of music, the stone jugs supplying the bass and the glass demijohns the treble. It happened that they were all in accord, and a fine harmony was the result.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

NATURAL HISTORY.

Interesting Stories About Animals.
Bulger, in Lexington, E., known as the "Funeral Dog," succumbed to old age. When Bulger's master was buried five years ago the faithful dog remained at the grave, howled piteously, and tried to scratch to the coffin. Afterward he followed to the cemetery every funeral that passed through the streets, and returned from the burial with the mourners. When a coffin was deposited in a vault, and the lid removed, Bulger would place his feet on the bench and survey the face of the corpse, as if still looking for his master.

Bisset, the animal trainer of Perth, taught an orang to wait on the table and perform other household duties belonging to servants. A chimpanzee has been trained to feed and attend a baker's oven fire on board ship. A female chimpanzee in the London Zoological Gardens could lock and unlock a door or drawer and thread any needle. In taking her meals she used knife, fork, spoon and drinking-cup with the same ease as a human being. The chamois baboon has been taught to blow bellows and to drive teams of wagon horses.

"Jim" was a crow with a crippled wing, that was found in a marsh near Cooper's Point, Pa. After recovering from his injuries he attended his benefactor on his sailing excursions, and his favorite roost was either at the masthead or on one of the men's shoulders. "Jim" always gave orders to tack when approaching the shore. One day, when the wind was ahead and the tide was low, short tacks were a necessity, but the skiff was soon ashore on her center-board. With a shrill, derisive cry, the crow struck its owner in the face with both wings, and flew away, evidently disgusted.

A farmer in Preston, Ct., who was troubled by rats, purchased a cat with a reputation as a mouser, and rats were soon among the things that were. But, on going into the cellar one day, he saw rats sharing the noonday meal of the cat. The cat appeared to be charmed by them. The farmer allowed the strange friendship to exist for several days, the rats coming regularly to partake of meals with the cat. Finally the farmer decided to put an end to the singular friendship, and, taking a gun, went to the cellar. No sooner, however, had he fired at and missed a rat than the cat jumped upon it and killed it. Now the farmer wants to know why the cat did not kill the rat before.

Sharks fifteen feet in length are found in Pacific waters. At Acapulco some of the hands on the steamship China baited a hook and caught one of the sharks. In the belly was found a human arm. There were also found in the maw of the shark the head and toes of a human foot. The arm was the left, and on it were plainly visible the initials tattooed in India ink, "A. H. C." About ten days previous to the taking of the shark a sailor from a British brig then in the harbor fell overboard and was lost. San Jose Joe, the monster shark of San Jose de Guatemala, was recently seen by the Captain of the China. This shark has for many years been the terror of the coast from San Jose de Guatemala to Punta Arena. It is said to be forty feet in length, and is extremely ferocious. In the last few years "Joe" has devoured half a dozen men, and the Guatemalan Government offered a reward of $500 to any one who would kill the devourer.

Custer was the name of a Newfoundland dog that belonged to a New Jersey girl. "We trained him to hold the halter in his mouth and lead the horses away," she said. "He could carry two eggs in his huge mouth and never break one. He could turn a knob as well as any one, and, on entering a room, would always turn around and put his paw on the door to close it. If this failed he would jump upon the door, taking care not to scratch with his nails. If any one sat down in the house without doffing his hat, Custer would stealthily slip up behind him and pull it off, then dropping it on the floor at the side of his chair would walk quietly away and lie down, as one who had performed a duty. We would wrap a few pennies in a paper and send him with it in his mouth to a store for candy, of which he was very fond. After delivering it to us he would stand expectantly by, wagging his tail and waiting for the sweet morsel he knew he was sure to get. He was fond of milk, too, but would carry it faithfully to our pet lamb, and, though he would glance lovingly into the pail occasionally, he was never known to betray our trust or steal one sip of the coveted beverage."

SPONGE UNDERCLOTHING.

A New York contemporary states that a Berlin inventor has patented a new kind of cloth, which consists principally of entirely of sponge. The sponges are first thoroughly beaten with a heavy hammer, in order to crush out all the mineral and vegetable impurities so that they can be easily washed out. They are then dried and pared, like a potato, with a sharp knife, the parings being sewed together. The fabric thus obtained is free from all the danger which sometimes arises from the absorption of poisonous dyes into the system; it absorbs without checking the perspiration, so as to diminish the danger of taking cold; it is a bad conductor, and therefore helps to maintain a uniform surface temperature; it can be more readily cleaned than the ordinary woolen garments; its flexibility diminishes the liability of chafing; the ease with which it can be employed in shoes, stockings, underwear, hat linings and other articles of clothing seems likely to make it especially useful as a protection against rheumatic and pulmonary attacks.—Hatters' Gazette.

BIOGRAPHY.

William Wordsworth.
This celebrated poet was born the 7th of April, 1770, in Cumberland county, England, and was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he was not remarkable for proficiency in his college curriculum, but was a diligent student after his fashion, devoting himself to those branches which were most congenial to his poetic tastes. He succeeded, however, in obtaining the degree of A. B., and possibly A. M. In 1791 he left Cambridge and spent some time in France, and, while there, imbibed the religious and political sentiments of the French; though he ultimately abandoned his republicanism and skepticism and became a conservative both in politics and religion.

His first published poem was entitled "An Evening Walk," his second, "Descriptive Sketches of a Tour Among the Alps." These two poems reveal admirable powers of observation and description, but failed to make an impression on the popular mind. He had some devoted admirers thus: Coleridge observed in the above poems the germs of extraordinary genius, and so did De-Quincy. There was also another admirer of Wordsworth's poetry—one as constant and unflinching as he was profound and reverent—it was Wordsworth himself. No man was ever more sublimely self-appreciative than Wordsworth. Though he was for a long time the laughing stock of the reviewers, especially of Jeffrey, of the Edinburgh Review, he did not suffer himself to be disheartened by the jeers of the critics, or the indifference of the reading world. He adhered to the opinion that he was a poet—the poet of the day. For example, he held that the fine passages of Byron's, particularly the third canto of "Childe Harold," were substantially stolen from his poem entitled "Pentam Abbe." He contended that the only difference between him and Byron was that, what had been naturally and finely expressed by him had been worked up into a sort of labored antithetical declamation by Byron. But the critics of the world did not agree with the egotist. Byron's poems sold with great rapidity, while Wordsworth would have starved for bread had not a friend died and left him a legacy of £300. The lucky poet made the most of his money, and the most of his time, and it soon began to be conceded that, while his poems had great faults, they were possessed of remarkable merits. They combined the charming simplicity of Cowper and Burns with a depth of philosophical reasoning peculiarly his own. In his "Lyrical Ballads" and the "Excursion," Mr. Wordsworth appears to Macaulay as a "high priest, for the worship of whom nature was the idol. No poems have ever indicated so exquisite a perception of the beauty of the outer world, or so passionate a love and reverence for that beauty, and yet," said he, "they are not popular, nor will they ever be as popular as the works of Scott. The feelings which pervade them are too deep, his passionate love for nature is too strong for popular sympathy."

Mr. Hazlett pronounced Wordsworth the "most original of poets. Unlike Scott, his poetry is not external but internal; he produces it from his own mind. He has produced a deeper impression, but on a smaller scale, than any of his contemporaries."

"The Excursion," "Lyrical Ballads," "Peter Bell," "The Waggoner," and "Sonnets on the River Duddon," are his principal works.

It was often complained that Wordsworth's subjects were too trite and familiar, but he contended to the last that the art of the poetic writing consisted in using common subjects, and making from them fine poems.

He had an invincible spirit and overcame all obstacles. Many of his poems are largely read to the present day.

A FORTUNE FOR TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

All the worn-out and mutilated legal tender notes come to the treasury for redemption. After new notes are issued in their stead, the old notes are destroyed by the process of maceration. This process includes the introduction of chemicals in the mass of notes, which, by the aid of steam are reduced to a pulp very much smaller in volume than the original notes. This pulp is of a grayish-white color; it has heretofore been thrown away. An enterprising young man in this city has had an idea on this subject, however, and is working it out. He has taken the pulp, and is molding it into different shapes. When dried the pulp assumes a light consistent form. Dogs, cats, bells, and all animals and everything else almost are reproduced. Out of the destruction of $1,000,000 in notes, he modeled a bullrope of heroic size; $10,000 goes to make a mouse; $50,000 into a paper weight, and so on through the list. He sells these "pieces of art" at 25 cents each. One can, for that amount, purchase at least what was once a million or more of dollars in the currency of the land.—Savannah (Ga.) News.

THE COMPAS.

"Captain," said a cheery youth, "is there any danger of disturbing the magnetic currents if I examine that compass too closely?" And the stern manner, loving his little joke, promptly responded, "No, sir; brass has no effect whatever on them."

and buggy.
A. W. Benson, of Minneapolis was in town last week.
We can now hear the "buzz" of the thresher.
Cigars, havanaes, Key West, or any other choice at Frankens.
Paints, oils and varnishes, at Mix & Du-Toit's Drug Store, Norwood.
Work will be commenced on the Carver and Chaska bridge soon.
20 bushels to the acre, is what wheat will average in this county.
George A. DuToit and family, spent last Sabbath in visiting friends at Minneapolis.
Pay day on the Hastings and Dakota,
out off on Monday and Tuesday last.
Mix & DuToit, at Norwood, sell the celebrated "American Sewing Machines."
S. W. Lusk, came down home from Ft.
Dodge on Saturday evening and returned on Monday. We acknowledge a "bundle" of Ft. Dodge papers.
Potatoes are plenty upon our streets at 30 cents per bushel. The yield is a good one this year.
The farm known as the "Jos. Schafplace" in Laketown, is for sale by Geo. A.
DuToit, on very reasonable terms. This is one of the best farms in the county.
Our Hook and Ladder Company, held a very interesting meeting last Saturday evening. They arranged for a special meeting to see about the "annual parade" and the harvest ball. Look out for a big time.
Another new Dress-making establishment is being opened in Chaska, by Misses Nannie & Ehrmantraut. They will move into the corner store, recently occupied by Mr. B. Logelin, as a tailor shop.
Monthly Fair, Saturday, August 23rd.
Remember it.
Change in Business.
A. G. Anderson, Esq., one of the most popular merchants of Carver, has withdrawn from the firm of Holmes & Anderson.
Andrew has been a very successful business man, and we presume he intends to open out again, alone, at Carver. He has both the means and ability to do a large trade.
New Buildings.
The brick work on Goodrich new store, is completed and the carpenters are putting on the finishing touches.
John Schultz, commences on his new building this week. He is building on the lot near Mr. Kaufmann.
Philip Meyer's new building is enclosed, and nearing completion.
Peter Illi's new store will be ready for his tenants in two weeks. It makes a neat appearance.
MARRIED.
Our friend Frederick Bullmer, was married last Saturday, and his many friends made him an informal call during the evening, upon which he invited them to step into Mr. Webbers saloon and "regaled all hands" to the havanaes." An hour or so was spent in social conversation after which the boys left, wishing Mr. and Mrs.
Bullmer, a long and pleasant life of wedded happiness.
Thanks.
We are under obligations to George A.
DuToit, and others for editorial help this week. Business and indisposition prevented us from devoting much time to the HERALD. There is nothing like having plenty of friends.
SULKY PLOWS.
We are informed that our machine dealers are selling quite a number of Sulky plows in our county this fall. Mr. Finne-gan's reports the sale of over a dozen already, while Mr. Henk informs us that he has sold quite a number and has orders for a number of plows on hand now.
It is said that better plowing can be done with the sulky than with the common plow.

WIRE FENCE.
The Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad Company, have built a barbed wire fence along their line of Railroad in this village, which will prevent the killing of so many cattle hereafter. But the law regarding wire fences should be so changed by the next Legislature, as to require persons or corporations building barbed fences, to put a wooden rail on top to prevent animals from running against them. Several accidents of that kind having already happened since the building of the above fence in this village.
The Minneapolis Exposition.
The great Minneapolis Fair comes off
September the 6th to the 11th, and promises to be something grand. Col. King, is getting everything into shape, and an unusually attractive programme, to draw an immense crowd of people. Half fare will be charged by the railroads. Carver County will be represented by nearly one half of its population this year.
The proceedings of the adjourned session of board of equalization, appears in this issue of the HERALD. This finishes up the equalization business for the year.
Friedrich Chickens.
Our "hunters" were heard from last Tuesday, the afternoon H. & D. train brought down some 100 chickens, the result of a days shooting. The HERALD of this acknowledges a number of fine young chickens.
Death of Jacob Bongard.
Jacob Bongard, one of the oldest settlers of the township of Benton, and well and favorably known throughout the County, died at his home, on Monday, Aug. 9th of consumption, after a lingering sickness.
Mr. B. was some 60 years of age, and leaves a wife and family of grown up children, who have the sympathy of a large circle of warm friends in their irreparable loss.
THANKS.-The thanks of the HERALD office are hereby returned to our old friend, Anton Westroel of Waconia, for a fine box of honey. Mr. W. is one of the best farmers of Waconia and knows how to run a farm so as to have all the luxuries of life.
Minneapolis and St. Louis House.
We publish the advertisement of this new hotel, Jacob Van Mulken, proprietor, in another column of this weeks issue.
This hotel was greatly enlarged last winter and has been furnished throughout with good beds and furniture and is now one of the best hotels in our young city.
Mr. Mulken also furnishes warm meals and cold lunches at all hours of day and night, and being near the depot will soon become a popular place of resort for travelers and farmers. Call and see.
PERSONALS.-Cal. P. Smith, the general and talented editor of the Hutchinson LEADER, and an old army comrade, made our office a pleasant call last Saturday.
We are sorry, however, that business called us away from home, and prevented our having a "good chat" over old times. Still we are pleased to learn that Cal. is meeting with deserved encouragement in his new home. Success to the LEADER and its editor.
Genl. Rooser, was in town on Tuesday, on his way to the "cut off."
S. W. Lusk, called on us Saturday and left us a bundle of late Ft. Dodge papers, for which he will please accept our thanks.
Mr. L. thinks some of making Ft. Dodge his future home.
Hon. E. B. Harrison, of Chanhassen, was in town Tuesday, visiting friends.
Mike Hoy, Ed. Brackett and Doc Nobles of Minneapolis, were looking over our town on Wednesday, they expressed themselves highly gratified with our city.
Jacob Meuwissen, of Cologne, was in town
Wednesday on business. Casper Kron-schabel of Benton was in town on Wednesday.
Cologne Items.
John Strauken, will shortly move into his new building and will open a boot and shoe store and do repairing.
John Holm's, new building is completed and he will put in a stock of general merchandise in about one month.
Jacob Meuwissen, has secured the service of a No 1 blacksmith, and is ready to attend to all work entrusted to him.
All farmers wishing to purchase new wagons, should call on Charley Sjobasjer as he has a lot for sale very "cheap for cash." Call and see.
The new flouring mill will be ready to commence running on or about October 1st. A large gang of Mill-wrights are pushing the work to completion. The engine and boiler will arrive in about 10 days. The mill is number 1 throughout.
DIED.
A young son of Casper Buschmeier, of this town, died Wednesday evening aged four months.
The funeral will take place from the Catholic Church in this city, Friday morning, Aug. 20th to which the friends of the family are invited.
SANGER FEST.
The annual meeting of the Minnesota
Sanger-band, will be held this year on Sunday, Aug. 29th at the village of Young-America. We are informed that the programme is a very interesting one, and will draw a very large crowd of people.

Oliver Goldsmith.

On the 10th of November, 1728, there was born, in an obscure village in Ireland, a child who was destined to become one of the greatest men of a time noted for the number of great men it produced. The one to whom we refer is Oliver Goldsmith, the poet, dramatist, novelist and historian. A man who was able to enchant readers of every nation by the beauty of his writings, but who was unable to control either himself or his passions; and of whom Garrick wittily and truly remarked, that he "wrote like an angel, but talked like a Poll."

He was truly a man of many parts; no matter what he attempted (with the pen) he did it well, which led the great Dr. Johnson to say that "the Goldsmith" always did best that which he "did not do." As a boy, he showed a few of the qualities which afterward distinguished the man.

He entered Trinity College, Dublin, as a scholar, or "poor scholar." Here he disagreed with his teacher, and was persecuted by him to such a degree as to render life at the college almost unbearable.

Smarting under his wrongs, he left the college, intending to embark for America. In this, as in most of his schemes, he failed, and he was persuaded by his friends to again enter college. This he did, after much persuasion, but he did not distinguish himself particularly in his studies, graduating with but moderate honors.

For the next few years his life was a wandering one. First, we find him in Edinburgh studying medicine; then on the continent, traveling through Holland, France, and Switzerland, paying his way by playing on his flute for the peasants to dance. From France he drifted over into "sunny Italy."

He did not stay long; his flute would not sustain him, as he says, in the "Vicar of Wakefield," that even the humblest peasant knew more about music than he did. Begging and playing his way back through France, we again find him one bright morning, in the spring of 1756, standing on the Dover docks, his hands in his pockets, and the world before him. He was well stocked with worldly knowledge, but of his goods he possessed little.

His worldly possessions were a strong Irish brogue, a stout heart, and an ambition to become an author. He naturally drifted to London, where he again turns up as a writer of reviews and miscellaneous articles for the magazines, earning but little money and spending that little quickly and foolishly. Through his improvidence he was always in debt, and was consequently compelled to engage in all kinds of literary hack work, in order to sustain himself—work for which he was fitted neither by genius nor inclination. It was under these circumstances that his first great poem, "The Traveller," was finally brought out. Its success was instantaneous, and surprised even his friends and admirers. Dr. Johnson said of it that it was superior to any poem since the days of Pope. Two years later the "Vicar of Wakefield" was published, and still later appeared "The Deserted Village," admitted by all critics to be one of the finest poems ever written. The success of these productions exceeded that of "The Traveller," but Goldsmith realized nothing from either of them. He had been compelled to sell them for a trifle (compared to their real worth) before they were published, in order to keep from starving. He also wrote "A History of Rome," which was distinguished more for the beauty of its composition than for its historical correctness. His "Animated Nature" was also written about this time. It was moderately successful, and is still considered a work of great value. The merit of all these works was undeniable, and Goldsmith became famous. He was made a professor of ancient history by the King, and was lionized by all London—notwithstanding which he continued as poor as ever. He was fond of the gaming table, and he suffered accordingly. He also made his mark as a dramatist. In January, 1768, his first effort, a comedy entitled the "Good-Natured Man," was produced at the Covent Garden. In spite of its merits—even his enemies admitted that it possessed merit—it was not very successful, running only a few nights. Still it paid its author better than anything he had written.

He realized from it, to him, large sums of £500. This, like the rest of his money, was soon spent. Four hundred of the five hundred pounds was spent for a room in the Temple, and the other hundred went for furniture. Then came a period of dissipation, and he was soon poorer than ever. In 1773 "She Stoops to Conquer" was produced also at the Covent Garden, and, unlike its predecessor, it immediately sprang into favor with the public. It ran a whole season, and was the most successful play of that time. It has come down to the present day with unimpaired success, and the announcement that "She Stoops to Conquer" is to be played in any of our theatres never fails to fill the house with an elegant and refined audience. At this time Goldsmith was leading an easy, enjoyable life, earning money fast, and spending it faster, with no thought save for the present. He was intimate with all the literary lions of the day, and Monday night would

What would not some of us give for the privilege of passing one night in their midst, of becoming, for the time, one of themselves; to sit at the same table and drink out of the same bowl with Johnson and his great disciples? But as such a thing may not be, we must draw upon our imagination for a picture of the scene as it was; and dull must be the imagination of him who cannot conjure up a glowing portrait. Let us look at them as they sit in their room at the Turk's Head. At the head of the table sits the ponderous, rough-spoken, but withal manly, Dr. Johnson. Near him sits Goldsmith's illustrious countryman, Edmund Burke, destined to become the first statesman in England able to test Johnson's power of argument to the utmost, but who modestly admitted that he was content to have "ring the bell" to the great Doctor. Farther down the table sits the "Magnanimous Goldsmith, the Gooseberry Fool," as he terms himself, his ugly face lighted up with pleasure and interest. The argument waxes warm, and impulsive "Noli" ventures to interfere, when he is silenced by a cutting remark from the sarcastic Beauchamp, who is in turn roared down by the "Doctor," while Sir Joshua Reynolds looks from behind his spectacles reproachfully upon Goldsmith, who has thus interrupted the conversation in which he was so much interested. At last, each worn out by the force of the other's genius, the giants separate, and the company disperses for the night to meet again, when the same programme will be gone through. Later, their meetings were held in another room in St. James's Coffee House, and here Garrick was often one of the company. Garrick, of whom Goldsmith wrote, that

He cast off his friends, as a huntsman his pack, For he knew when he pleased he could, whilst them he took.

It was at one of these meetings that Garrick by one of his witty remarks wounded Goldsmith's feelings. Whereupon he retired to his room, wrote that brilliant poem "Retaliation," which added so much to his reputation as a poet. These meetings were bright spots in Goldsmith's checkered career, but they were soon darkened by days of privation and suffering, which were finally ended by his death on the 4th of April, 1774.

Several persons have written biographies of Goldsmith, but perhaps the best, certainly the fairest, is the one written by our own gifted countryman, Washington Irving. Macaulay has also written of him, but it is written with an unfriendly pen, and it is better that his work should be forgotten, since it gives us a bad impression of one of whom every other writer spoke so well. Friendly or unfriendly, however, as his critics and biographers may be, they still agree that, as a writer, he has few equals; interesting, and without the vulgarity and coarseness of Smollet, and another author of that period. Whether it was in prose or in poetry, he was as he said of Garrick, "If not first, in the first line." More than a century has passed since he was laid to rest in the Temple burial grounds, and his writings still stand as models of English composition. As a man he was the embodiment of many faults and virtues, the virtues, let us hope, far outweighing the faults. Garrick wrote of him as a "scholar, rake, gamester, dupe, Christian and poet."

Scholar and poet he was, as his writings abundantly testify. Gamester he undoubtedly was, and sorely did he suffer for it. Dupe, too, he was of his own passions and inclinations, and that he was a Christian few who have read his works will be prepared to deny. Garrick might have added that he was an Irishman. His improvidence, which was only equalled by his generosity; his light-heartedness, which even the direst misfortune could not destroy; and, lastly, the brilliancy of his genius, all bear witness that he was a son of the country whose children were ever bright and unfortunate. Had he been a man of stronger will, and capable of overcoming his love of dissipation, he would have left a name behind him even greater than it is, but as it is he was, undoubtedly, a great man. Dr. Johnson asserts it, and other writers agree with him. A statue at the gate of the college he entered as a "charity scholar," and a monument in Westminster Abbey, with a Latin inscription by Dr. Johnson, will stand it may be for ages—when his works are forgotten, to testify to the greatness of Oliver Goldsmith, the man of many parts. —Chicago Ledger.

A KNOWING SNAKE.
A Georgia man was fishing near a rock under which was a snake's den, when the reptile came gliding from a foraging expedition, and was disappearing in the hole under the rock when, with a dexterous movement, the man seized him by the tail and threw him twenty feet away. The snake hardly knew what happened, and again essayed to enter his domicile in the same manner. Again he was treated as before. Never despairing, for the third time the wily serpent came to the rock. This time he approached deliberately, as if contemplating the situation. For a while he kept his defensive position, when he carefully began to uncoil, at the same time disappearing tail foremost into the den, to the admiration of the man who had been amusing himself at his expense.

Fifty years ago the products of our soil were scarcely thought worthy of a place in the statistics of our industry; now our exports of these amount to nearly $600,000,000 annually, and our Western granaries are treasure houses

OUR JUVENILES.

"Good-By! Vacation is Over!"
Oh, so much to say good-by to, when the summer goes away!
The sweet, glad days of summer that cannot longer stay!
Good-by to fair green meadows, all starred with daisies white,
And the graceful nodding ferns, and grasses tall and light,
And buttercups so golden, beneath the summer sky,
Round which the yellow butterflies so lazily would fly;
And oh! the clover blossoms, sweet as the new-made hay,
Where bees would gather honey the fireling happy day.

Good-by to shady woodland, and little mountain rills,
In shadow or in sunshine its own song singing still;
And to the stately trees where the birds build their nest,
And the leaves so softly rustle to tell them to their rest;
And all the sweet, wild roses that in the hedge grow,
And the fragrant blossoms hiding in cool green grass below;
To meadow brooks and mill-pools, to orchard and to lane,
We said good-by till the summer comes again.
But the barns, the fragrant barns, with doors set open wide,
To welcome summer's harvest, and the boys and girls beside.
Oh! the children's shouts and laughter, the gleeful calls which rang Through every stout old rafter, as from beam to beam they sprang!
But alas! Good-by, old barn, for vacation time is over—
Good-by to beam and rafter, and old grain-sprinkled floor!
To all the dear sweet hours beneath the summer's sky—
To birds and field and blossoms we sadly bid good-by!

My Dream.
I had a funny dream last night.
I dreamed I started on a voyage in a nice little boat, rowed by two very funny-looking men, and I took an oar and soon found that I was growing very wise. I seemed to be one of the wise men of Gotham that went to sea in a bowl. However, this time the bowl was stronger, and so my story will be longer.

We saw three ships come sailing by,
Sailing by, sailing by;
We saw three ships come sailing by,
On New Year's day in the morning.

As we neared the cliffs of Mother Gooseland, I heard a sweet voice singing:
Bobby Shafto's gone to sea;
Helen come back and marry me.
And on the cliffs sat the sorrowful little maiden, with big tears rolling down her cheeks, and all for Bobby Shafto. There we left her. Of course, in landing in a strange country, my first thought was to pay my respects to the King and Queen, but

The King was in his counting-house,
Counting out his money;
The Queen was in the parlor,
Eating bread and honey.

No audience there. So I sauntered through the queer-looking streets which were bordered by little gables. Seeing a pretty girl looking out of a window, I said:

Madame Mary, quite contrary,
How does your garden grow?
With silver bells and golden bells,
And fair maids all in a row!

Pretty soon I came to a hill, and, as I looked, up went
Jack and Jill to draw a pail of water;
Jack fell down and broke his crown,
And Jill came tumbling after.

While I was grieving over them I heard the mournful cry of Ding-dong! bell! Topsy in the well!
Who put her in? Little Johnny Green!
Who pulled her out? Great Jack Stout!
What a naughty boy was that
To down poor mamma's pussy cat.

Suddenly there was an uproar, and along came, at full speed, with a crowd in chase of him—
Tom, Tom, the piper's son,
The whole a jig, and away did run.

Before Tom had fairly got away, I heard a shout of—Hark, hark! The dogs do bark; the beggars are coming to town;
Some in rags, some in jags, and some in velvet gowns.

Feeling tired and hungry after my walk and all the stirring scenes I had been through, I sought shelter in an inn, and said to the landlady:
"Oh, what have you got for dinner, Mrs. Bond?"
"There's beef in the larder and ducks in the pond; Fry, fry, fry, come and be killed, For you must be killed and my customers filled!"

Just as I was putting a piece of the delicious roasted duck in my mouth, I asked to find that I had overslept myself, and the breakfast-bell was ringing. —The Nursery.

Two Ways.
Here is a story of pluck and foresight which is worth telling to boys. Two lads, of about 20 years of age, were thrown out of situations in New York, just at the time when the Messrs. Collins were sending out laborers to open up a railway through Brazil.

"There is no actual trade," said one, "between this country and Brazil. Some day there must be an enormous trade. Somebody will make an enormous fortune. Why not you and I?"

The boys acted at once upon the idea. One sailed to Brazil, and opened an agency for American manufactures. The other remained in this country, soliciting orders for Brazilian products, and filling those obtained by his friend. Since then, a dozen others have pushed into the field; but these young fellows have the advantage of first occupancy, and bid fair to win success.

Most lads wish to grow rich. There are two ways to accomplish their end. One is by shrewd, far-sight ventures such as this. Girard, when a cabin-boy, saw the importance of the West India trade, and the aim of his business life was to secure it.

If a boy has not these qualities, a sure road to riches is always open through economy. The largest number of fortunes are made by strict, unrelaxing saving of pennies. American boys scarcely know the meaning of economy. William Chambers, of the great Scotch publishing firm, supported himself through boyhood on three-pence-half-penny a day, working by day, and studying at night, and dragging himself out of his wretched garret before dawn to read to a baker of literary tastes, who paid him by a roll for his breakfast. "He who tholes (endures), overcomes," was his motto. There is none better. —Youth's Companion.

CAPITAL AND LABOR ON THE BIG FARMS OF DAKOTA.

We spent an evening in the comfortable home of one of the superintendents, and heard him explain the system of book-keeping. Every man is engaged by contract, for a certain time, to do certain work, for certain wages. He receives his money on presenting to the cashier a time check certifying the amount and nature of his labor. The average price paid to hands is $18 a month and board. In harvest they get $2.25 a day. A record is kept by the foreman of the amount of wheat turned out by each thresher, by the driver of each wagon of the amount of wheat loaded by him, and by the receiver at the elevator of the amount of wheat brought in by each team. All the farm machinery and the provisions are bought at first hands for wholesale prices. Mules and horses are bought in St. Louis. Wheat is not stacked or stored, but shipped to market as rapidly as possible. Everything is regulated by an exact system, and this is what makes the farms a success.

Brains and energy in the man who chooses them and in those whom he chooses as his subordinate officers—this is the secret of the enormous profits which have been made on the Dakota farms. The cost of raising the first crop was about $11 an acre; each subsequent crop costs $8. The average yield for this year was about nineteen bushels to the acre. This could be sold at Fargo on Oct. 1 for 80 cents a bushel. A brief calculation will give you $4.20 per acre profit on the new land, and $7.20 for all the rest; or, say, $130,000 gain on one crop. These figures I believe to be too small, rather than too large.

But does this large farming pay for the country? It absorbs great tracts of land, and keeps out smaller farmers. It employs tramps, who vanish when the harvest is over, instead of increasing the permanent population. It exhausts the land. The cultivation is very shallow. There is no rotation of crops. Everything is taken from the ground; nothing is returned to it. Even the straw is burned. The result of this is that the average crop from any given acre grows smaller every year, and it is simply a question of time under the present system how long it will take to exhaust the land. —Henry J. Van Dyke, Jr., in Harper's Magazine.

THE DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION.

It was upon a South Carolina plantation up in Fairfield county. The baby was taken with the croup, and Dr. Trochee, the great French physician, was called in.

"Bad-a-case, bad-a-case!" said Dr. Trochee, shaking his head; "but me tink me kin kore him; feck a me one new akiessee—quick!"

Mrs. E., the mother of the child, whispered to a servant, who departed, and in a few moments came running in with the newest poleax on the plantation, and presented it to the doctor.

"Me no want dat," said the doctor; "take a him bac, an feck a me one new akiessee—quick!"

Again the mother whispered to bring the broad-ax, thinking that would do, as it was bright and new, bought only a few days previous, and never as yet used in any way, and the servant disappeared, and sooner than it takes to tell it returned, presenting the glittering blade, full front, to Dr. Trochee.

"Take ear, sir! Wanted to cut a me troat, ha? De debble! What fool, ha! me no want a dat; run feck a me new akiessee!"

Away went the servant, and reappeared this time with the hatchet.

"Le diable, what a fool! Can you no understand? Can you no feck a me akiessee?"

"Doctor," said Mrs. E., "them's all the kind of axes we have got, and we have brought you the newest on the plantation."

"Me no want dem, Mrs. E.; tink me want akiessee to cut a baby's troat? Me no want a broad akiessee, nor de pole ax akiessee, nor de pole akiessee, new feckery akiessee."

"Spell it, doctor," spell what you want; we can't understand you," said Mrs. E.

"Me want akiessee, feckery akiessee, new feckery akiessee; me no spell yu; I disble himsel no spell a me dat, by gar! Go way, jack nigger! Go way—feck a me broad akiessee an' narrow akiessee—what a fool, ha! Go way, jack nigger; me feck a him myself."

And, leaving the family in great amusement, out went Dr. Trochee in high dudgeon, and, after rummaging about awhile, returned with what he wanted—a new-laid egg.

You can't always judge by outside appearances. Who, for instance, would believe the plump and sleek exterior of the shaded covered such a wilderness of bones?

TWO ENGLISH COLLEGES.

Trinity College, in Cambridge, is one of the largest collegiate foundations in Europe. It is on both sides of the street, for a new court—the Master's Court—was built at the expense of Dr. Whewell, and his cipher, W. W., is on the spacious tower. The King's Gateway is the entrance to this famous college. The great canopyed statue is that of Henry VIII., in whose time this vast portal was built by the scholars of Trinity.

We pass into the great court, with its velvet award and the lofty stone conduit known as Nevill's Fountain. On one side is the Master's Lodge, with a fine selection of portraits and a set of state rooms. On the same side is the lofty gothic hall, with a high-peaked Flemish roof.

In term time, when the great hall, with its painted glass and armorial bearings, is crowded with students, the sight is remarkable enough.

On entering the chapel, the ante-chapel should be carefully noted, with the statue of Newton, in a sitting posture, the statue of Barrow, and the statue of Macaulay, and soon there will be one of Whewell.

A second great gateway, with the statue of Edward III., leads into the second court. On the south is a third gateway, with four towers on the angles, called, from a statue of Queen Elizabeth in her robes, the Queen's Gateway.

The library was begun by Barrow and designed by Wren. It is the most classic building in the University, in Wren's favorite style of the old Italian. It overlooks the river, and below the library is a colonnade opening on to the bridge and Lime Walk. In the value of its contents this library ranks next to the University library; it possesses the mathematical MSS. of Newton and the poetical MSS. of Milton. It numbers nearly 100,000 volumes. The woodwork is by Gibbons, and the series of marble busts by Ronducci.

Recent additions have been made of the busts of Prof. Sedgwick, Mr. Tennyson and Mr. Ellis; at the end of the room is Thorwaldsen's of Lord Byron.

The next largest is St. John's, which is famous for its series of splendid improvements. The college consists of four courts; the plain brick edifices are carried to the brink of the river, but on the other side of the river is the magnificent new court designed by Rickman, the finest modern structure of all the Cambridge quadrangles.

The massive antique gateway of the first court has the armorial bearings of the founders of this college, and Christ's College, the Lady Margaret, Countess of Richmond and mother of Henry VII. The chapel and hall are in the front court. The second court is still larger, and is one of the very few untouched by modern restoration.

The third court has a cloister on the west, and the antique library, unaltered for generations, takes up the whole part of the north side. The Master's Lodge, finished in 1865 by Sir G. G. Scott, extends westward. A light, gothic bridge over the canal conducts into the new court, a stately quadrangle, with a vaulted cloister along the south side.

The magnificent chapel, erected mainly by the society, and enriched with many gifts at great expense, was opened in 1869. It was erected by Sir G. G. Scott, and has some resemblance to the Sainte Chapelle at Paris. The roof and painted glass are especially remarkable. Chantry's monument to Henry Kirke White, erected at the expense of an American gentleman, is to be transferred to this chapel. —Chicago Ledger.

IN THE POLICE COURT.

Attorney for the defense of a man charged with having brutally beaten a woman, cross-examining the woman:

"Now, then, state to the court what your relations with this defendant have been."

"Well, I have supported him for two years, eh? You positively swear that you have supported him for two years?"

"Well, not exactly for two years, but—"

"Oh, ho, not exactly two years, eh? Your Honor will observe that the witness contradicts herself. Very well, miss, what did you mean by falsely asserting that you have supported this innocent gentleman two years? Answer that, if you can!"

"Well, I meant—"

"Never mind what you meant; don't you dare to tell me what you meant. Tell the court, now, if you please, what portion of the two years you did not support this honest fellow, my client?"

The only portion of the time I haven't supported him during the past two years was the various times he was in jail."

Attorney subsides.

A BITTER TONGUE.

It is strange but true that some people delight in saying bitter things to their neighbors. You are never safe with them. When you have done your best to please, and are feeling very unkindly and pleasantly, out will pour some underhand stave, which you alone can understand—a sneer which is masked, but which is too well aimed to be misunderstood. It may be at your person, or your mental feeling, your foolish habit of thought on some little secret opinion confessed in a moment of genuine confidence. It matters not where he flings it; to you, since the wish is to make you suffer, he is all the happier the nearer he touches your heart. How much unhappiness do such mean staves

A BRIGAND'S GRATITUDE.

Statesmen have not a high opinion of the gratitude of their followers. Many of them have learned, with Sir Robert Walpole, to define it as "a lively sense of future favors." Even those who take men as they are, and do not expect all the virtues of the Decalogue in a place expectant, have often had cause to say with Wordsworth:

I've heard of hearts unkind, kind deeds
Alas! the gratitude of man
Bath oftens left me mourning.

And yet, "the still, small voice of gratitude," as Gray calls it, has frequently influenced the most obdurate of men. An English official once had an experience which taught him that even an outlaw may be swayed by gratitude.

He was traveling in a Greek province of Turkey, notorious for the number and fierceness of its brigands. One of the bands was commanded by a "Captain," on whose head a high price had been set, and for whom a Turkish force was then seeking.

He was honored by the peasants as a regular termenas. The name, which means soiled, is, among the Greeks, the title of honor for a brigand, whose filthy garments indicate that he has been long "on the road," and so fully employed as not to have had time to wash them.

With a strong escort, the Englishman was journeying at night. An adventurous spirit led him to stray away from his companions. He was following, by the light of the moon, a forest path, when suddenly his bride was seized by several stout fellows.

Grasping his revolver, the Englishman essayed to use it, but was prevented by the "Captain" laying hold of it. A struggle ensued, in which the pistol was broken.

At this moment, when self-defense was out of the question, the Englishman thought of another means of protection. Removing the white cover of his official cap, he pointed out the crown on it, and announced himself as an officer of the English Government.

Instantly the "Captain" ordered his bride to be released, and with his companions retired a short distance to consult. In a few minutes he returned to inquire if the gentleman was a son of the Consul of the neighboring town.

"I am," was the answer.

"You are free to go where you please," replied the "Captain," with much feeling. "Your father has saved the lives and property of many Greeks. Besides, we all love the English."

"A few miles hence," he continued, "you will fall in with the camp of the Pasha, who, with 800 troops, intends to surround yonder mountain, where he expects to intrap us. Give me your word of honor not to reveal until tomorrow the fact of meeting me; then you and your escort will be allowed to pass unmolested."

The Englishman gave the promise, and in a couple of hours entered the camp of the Pasha. There he was entertained with an excellent supper, and also with the plan for capturing the brigands on the next day.

Bound as he was by his word, the Englishman silently listened. But when, on the morrow, the Pasha found his game flown, and learned that his guest had encountered the brigand, who was much annoyed. But he knew too well the English character, which regards a pledged word as an oath, to find fault with the official's reticence.

THE AMERICAN HUSBAND.

It is an acknowledged fact that the average American man makes a model husband. He recognizes his wife as an equal in all things. He appreciates her sacrifices, pities her in illness, and sympathizes with her trials. He strives to be in all things her burden-bearer. But, as an offset against these good qualities, he is, in many cases, apt to be too ambitious—perhaps for his wife's sake, but still too ambitious. He purchases property; he becomes interested in town affairs; he has abilities which are appreciated by his fellow-townsmen; he is willing, he is a little vain, and readily assumes the duties and offices which are tendered him. Gradually he undertakes more and more, until every night in the week has its quota of engagements and he lives in a vortex of business. From the office to a hurried supper, thence to some meeting, to return home at midnight to deserted rooms—for all the weary ones are sleeping—thus he goes. Yes, he is tired, but it is the fatigue consequent upon excitement and pleasant work; but how is it with the wife, left alone for weary hours, denied his loved companionship? If she has children she can interest herself in them; watching their awakening minds, conscientiously striving to mold their plastic character, but to this her mind must stoop, and stooping is a wearisome attitude mentally as well as physically. Gradually the affairs of the family devolve upon her; she bears a double burden, and that without the help of loving sympathy. When, on rare occasions, she has her husband's company, there is little pleasure in it, for they are not en rapport as formerly; and even to his children he is a stranger. In order to gain worldly prominence and gain, he is allowing the home happiness to slip from his grasp, and becoming to wife and children only their banker!

HISTORY.

The San Francisco Vigilance Committee of 1856.

At the time of the organization of the "Committee of Safety" of '56, San Francisco was in a desperate condition. The worst elements of society had possession of the Government, and respectability was at a discount. Taxes were $4.84 on the $100, with an ever-increasing and alarming indebtedness. Elections began after the polls were closed. The Judges of the courts were elected by the people, and the candidates who put out the most money were returned as elected. There was no remedy but revolution.

James King, banker, had commenced the publication of the Evening Bulletin, devoted to reform. Clear-headed, brave even to rashness, he did not hesitate to speak of things as they deserved, and his paper at once leaped into popularity and success. Having an ample field, he exposed corruption wherever he found it. The Government of the city was a dual one—that is, there was a city Board of Aldermen and a Council, and also a county Board of Supervisors, for the city embraced the entire county. This form of government was originated for the purpose of doubling the offices, so that "the boys" could have good pickings. An election had just been held. James Casey was Inspector of Elections in district No. 6 in the city. "Yankee" Sullivan was Inspector of Elections in district No. 12, outside the city proper. Not being able to read and write, Sullivan, after the polls were closed, sought the assistance of Casey in making up his return. Casey, on taking possession of the ballot-box, remarked: "There has been some big cheating here," and, tossing the ballots upon the floor, deliberately proceeded to make his returns to suit himself, returning himself elected as Supervisor from the Twelfth district, when there had been no ballots cast for him, and he was serving as Inspector in the Sixth district. In commenting upon the fact, the editor of the Bulletin took occasion to speak of Casey's conviction, in New York, of a criminal offense. Casey, Ned McGowan and two others shook their heads to see who should shoot Mr. King. The lot fell to Casey. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon, on the corner of Montgomery and Washington streets, Casey met King, and with a navy revolver in his hand, advanced and fired. King was fatally wounded, and Casey was glad to find refuge in the jail, under charge of his friend, Sheriff Scannell. The city was in commotion. In the evening, the excited had subsided to that calm which precedes a storm. The citizens quietly entered a door of a warehouse, registered their names and retired. When they registered they were given their number, which they were enjoined to remember. Before midnight 600 had registered. The next evening they were called to meet in Turnverein Hall, where they were told that each 100 would constitute a company or division. From No. 1 to No. 100 would be known as the first division. From No. 101 to No. 200 would be known as the second division, etc. Places of meeting for the respective divisions were appointed, and they were ordered to elect a Captain and Lieutenants. They were afterward organized as regiments, etc. The organization was simple and easy, and proved very effective. Cora, who had shot and killed United States Marshal Richardson, was confined in jail with Casey. It was Sunday morning—a bright, sunny day. The alarm bell sounded. "Vigilantes" hurried to the rendezvous. Four detachments, numbering over 6,000 men in all, took up the line of march, and surrounded the jail. The Sheriff held a short parley with the President of the committee, and surrendered the prisoners, who were removed to the quarters of the committee. They were tried by the Executive Committee, which consisted of twenty-six members. For sentence of death the verdict must be unanimous. Then there was a Board of Delegates, consisting of three representatives from each division of 100 men, a board which, in the aggregate, numbered over 200 men, who, by a majority vote, had to ratify or annul the sentence of the Executive Committee. Prisoners were allowed counsel, and all witnesses whom they desired were summoned. It was not Lynch law. A man had a fair show for his life than before an average jury of twelve men, but there was no appeal. Casey and Cora were hanged. "Billy Mulligan," "Dutch Charley," and many others (the names of some of whom it would astonish many readers to hear) were shipped out of the country. Brace and Abernethy were also hanged. In about four months, after the atmosphere had been cleared, the committee made a grand parade, stacked their muskets, and turned the government over to the civil authorities. At the next election the people's candidates were elected. The first year the taxes were reduced to $2.25 on $100, 95 cents of which went for the support of the public schools, leaving $1.30, which paid all current expenses of the government, and provided a sinking fund for the gradual liquidation of the enormous indebtedness already accumulated. For ten years after that San Francisco was the best and most economically governed city in the country. Perhaps this bit of history may be a warning to Communists, wherever they are to be found.

OUR MINERAL WEALTH.

The Amount of Gold and Silver Mined in This Country—The Outlook.

In the opinion of some experts the production of precious metals in the United States is just beginning. In the last ten years we have advanced from $17,320,000 in silver and $33,750,000 in gold to $45,846,109 in silver and $44,880,223 in gold, but it is said that the next census (ten years) will more than quadruple this production. During the first seven years from 1870 to 1877 the production of gold exceeded that of silver in our country, but since then the production of silver has exceeded that of gold $5,562,505. This was caused in part by the discovery of the great silver mines at Leadville, Col., and in part by the decrease of the gold production of the Comstock lode in Nevada. It is a fact not generally known that in the production of the Comstock lode 41 20-100 is gold. The decrease of yield in Comstock was $12,464,481 in silver and gold during 1878-1879, while the increase of silver production in Colorado was $8,000,000. The exact production of gold and silver during the last census, as near as it can be ascertained, was as follows:

Year.	Silver.	Gold.
1870.	$17,320,000	$33,750,000
1871.	18,240,000	34,250,000
1872.	19,840,000	34,717,860
1873.	21,430,000	35,209,528
1874.	23,020,000	35,701,196
1875.	24,610,000	36,192,864
1876.	26,200,000	36,684,532
1877.	27,790,000	37,176,200
1878.	29,380,000	37,667,868
1879.	30,970,000	38,159,536

In this country $4,000,000 is annually consumed in making jewelry and for the arts. Last year about $74,700,000 in gold was imported to America, and this added to the home production gives an increase of $106,170,262. If we add still further the $37,033,857 in silver produced, we have $143,204,119 of a monetary increase to our national wealth. Large as this increase may appear, it is as nothing when compared with our future possibilities. The sudden influx of European capital to the trans-Missouri country will meet a want long felt, and cause the great mineral wealth of the West to be rapidly developed. The rich deposits of gold and silver there hidden in the earth will now be brought forth, converted into money and made to administer to the wants and conveniences of mankind. America will astonish the world in the next ten years, and, perhaps, shake the value of precious metals by her enormous production of them. Gen. Brisson, of the United States army, says: "I have lived ten years in the West, and I sincerely believe 1890 will not pass without giving us an annual production of $400,000,000 of gold and silver in these United States."

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

One of the most remarkable legal records of cases of circumstantial evidence is that of Soren Qrest, a Danish pastor. No man's life ever showed more dramatically the effects of ungodly temper and the justice of God's dealings. The story is almost unknown, we believe, to American readers.

Soren from his birth was a victim to a fiery temper. When but a child he killed a dog which provoked him. When at college he killed a comrade in a burst of passion.

He became a clergyman, and was a devout, estimable man, but for this one uncontrollable fault. A man named Morten Burns, whom Soren rejected as a suitor for his daughter, vowed to be revenged on the old man.

He sent his brother, Niels Burns, to work as a servant on the pastor's farm. Niels was stupid, and very soon Soren and he quarreled, the clergyman as usual indulging in abuse, threats, and even blows.

At last Niels disappeared, and Morten his brother, accused Soren of the murder. A neighbor testified that she had heard the pastor abusing Niels in a frantic rage; that he cried out, "I will beat that dead dog!" and struck him with a spade twice, and that Niels fell—dead as she supposed.

Another man deposed that on the same evening he saw a man carrying a heavy sack to another part of the pastor's grounds, and Soren's own servants testified that they saw him by moonlight in his green dressing-gown and white cap digging a hole in a cabbage bed.

The hole was opened, and Niels' body was found there. Soren was tried, and sentenced to death. Before his execution he confessed that his rage was so great that he had struck Niels, fully intending to kill him, but that the man, frightened, had run away.

"If," said Soren, "I found his dead body and buried it, it was in my sleep. God has brought me to this punishment. Murder was in my heart. He is just," he said, and was hanged.

Twenty-one years after Soren was executed, Niels Burns returned. He testified that he had gone, when wounded, to his brother, who dug up a body buried in the cemetery, dressed it in Niels' clothes, and buried it himself in the garden, wearing the pastor's dressing-gown and cap. The chain of evidence was thus complete against Soren, and he was punished, illegally, yet justly, for the murder he had purposed to do.

PAYING IN KISSES.

Mr. Edly gave Miss Hitzlerman a fine lot of jewelry, at New Bern, N. C., and she wore it for several weeks. Then he brought a suit to recover it, on the ground that he had simply lent it to her. She testified that, by the terms of a mutual agreement, she was to pay for the jewelry by kissing Mr. Edly every morning for 100 days. He called and got his kisses, on his way to work, every day for about a month. Then he grew bold and wanted to take a hug as well as a kiss. There was no provision in the bargain for hugging, and she repulsed him, even restricting his kisses to a mere touch of his lips to her cheek. He thought he was being cheated, and

FARM AND HOME.

Farm Hints.

(From the American Agriculturist for June.)

PRUNING.—June is a good time for pruning. Larger limbs may be cut away now, covering all cuts with varnish, paint, or melted grafting wax.

PEAR SLUGS, when so numerous as to do injury, may be destroyed by dusting the leaves with lime or ashes; even dry earth may be used with good effect.

BASKETS AND CRATES for marketing should be provided, and let them be distinctly and neatly marked with the address of both shipper and consignee.

SALT-BOXES are easily made and are very useful. A few boxes in the pasture will be a saving of the salt which is otherwise thrown upon the soil and largely lost. Long flat troughs may be used.

CALVES should have a good run of grass. The pushing of them without overdoing must be kept in mind. The first year's growth determines, in a great measure, what shall be the future of the animal.

A HORSE-FORK.—In the hurry of hayting, the saving which is made by using a horse-fork will more than pay its cost in a few days. As a time and labor-saving machine, a horse-fork should be used on every farm of any ordinary size.

CUCURBIT.—Begin as soon as the fruit is set to visit the trees in early morning; the sluggish insects may then be jarred from the trees and caught upon sheets opened beneath to catch them. The cucurbits thus caught should be swept into the fire.

ROBBING POSTS.—All who have the comfort of their animals at heart—and, we may add, desire to preserve their fences intact—should provide a few rubbing posts for the animals. The pleasure of seeing them used is pay enough, but there is more.

Pigs for early fall killing will need a regular and generous feeding of bran and meal slops. A quantity of milk, with a run in the grass, will do them good. A little forcing at the start pays well for pigs that are grown for the early market.

TENT CATERPILLARS are best removed in the early morning while they are in their nests, and the dew glistening upon the web. A pole and swab may be used. The wild cherry is such a favorite of the tent caterpillar that it is hardly worth the while to keep any such harbors for it near the orchards.

THINNING FRUIT.—The sooner this essential to the production of the best fruit is done the better. It is seldom overdone, and too frequently entirely neglected. Thinning increases the size and improves the quality of the fruit, and with young trees, just starting into bearing, it is a necessity.

CODLING MOTH.—The "worms," after leaving the fruit, seek some hiding place to undergo their changes, and bands of cloth or hay, put upon the trunks of the trees, will catch many of them. The bands should be removed once in ten days, and the insects that have gathered beneath them killed.

BLACKBERRIES need much the same treatment as their near neighbors, the raspberries. The young canes are allowed a little longer growth, and should be pinched at five or six feet—all not needed are to be removed. Both the young and old canes should be kept upright by using stakes or trellises.

RASPBERRIES.—The green shoots that are growing now are the ones to bear the next year's fruit, the fruiting ones this season dying after the berries have ripened. When the growing shoots reach four feet they should be pinched off. Those not required for next year are to be treated as weeds. The old canes are to be cut away after fruiting.

THE BORNES of the peach and apple trees are to be looked to. When once in the tree there is no surface remedy. Heaping earth around the base of the tree, or using a close-fitting paper band will keep the female insect from depositing her eggs. For killing the worms the use of the knife and wire probe is the most effective. Their whereabouts is known by the sawdust they make, and depression of the bark. Use the knife cautiously.

WORKING HORSES.—A thorough washing with clean water, not too cold, will greatly aid in keeping the working horses in good condition; it removes the accumulated and dried sweat and dirt much better than dry rubbing. The harness should be kept clean and soft that it may not gall the animals. A little powdered aloes rubbed on with the oil will keep away any insects that are likely to infest the harness, and will do no injury to the horse.

Domestic Economy. Use white oil cloth, bound with red, for wall protectors back of the kitchen table, and under the hooks where pans, etc., are hung.

Potato water, in which potatoes have been scraped, the water being allowed to settle, and afterward strained, is good for sponging dirt out of silk.

SCOTCH BROTH.—Put a tea-cupful of pearl barley into four quarts of cold water, let boil, add two onions, two turnips, two carrots cut in slices, and one carrot grated, boil slowly for three hours and salt and pepper to taste.

SWAMP CARPETS getting. Even a rag carpet should be treated with consideration. A severe digging with a broom wears the warp and scrapes out the lint of the rugs quite needless.

A Business Man's Opinion. C. B. Durr, of Toledo, O., says he has used Day's Kidney Pills in his family with results so superior to all other treatments that he regards them as the best kidney cure in the world.

Dr. B. B. Durr, 8 East Third St.

LEMON CREAM.—Take a pint of thick sweet cream, and put to it the yolks of two eggs well beaten, four ounces of fine sugar, and thin kind of one lemon; boil it up; then stir it till almost cold; put the juice of a lemon in a dish or bowl and pour the cream upon it, stirring it till quite cold.

KING GEORGE'S PUDDING.—One pint of bread-crumbs, half pint flour, teaspoonful of baking powder sifted in flour, a quarter of a pound currants, raisins, a quarter of a pound chopped suet, coffee-cupful of milk, one egg; tied tightly in a bag, and boiled three hours; to be eaten with hard sauce.

UNION CAKE.—Two cups sugar, one-half cup butter, three-fourths cup of sweet milk, three cups flour, whites of six eggs, one-half teaspoonful soda and one teaspoonful cream of tartar. Custard for the layers—One pint milk, one-half cup of sugar, two eggs, two tablespoonfuls corn starch; boil until thick cream, and spread between the layers when cool. Flavor to taste.

BAKED HALIBUT, CREOLE STYLE.—Put a halibut steak weighing about a pound into the middle of a pan; sprinkle it with a piece of garlic the size of a pea, cut fine; then spread with tomato enough to cover the fish; then cover with bread-crumbs. Add a little butter and salt; then garnish the dish with more tomatoes, and bake twenty minutes. Better to bake on dish to serve on.

They are telling now of some sort of a grain-producing plant that will grow without irrigation, and is suitable bread-stuff for all the sage-bush region of the Great American desert. The seed is already planted, they say, and that may be a sign of things to come.

Many farmers, and especially farmers' sons, cannot rid themselves of the fascination of breeding horses for speed. It is well for them to bear in mind that weight, endurance and strength are what are most needed on the farm, and that speed is not compatible with those qualities.

(St. Louis Globe-Democrat.)

An Unpleasant Youthful Recollection.

From early youth I had been a sufferer with severe headache, writes C. W. Eck, Esq., proprietor of the St. Louis Mo., St. Louis, Mo. Headaches, by the use of which I endeavored to obtain relief, proved ineffectual. At last some friends recommended the Hamburg Drops to me, and since using them I feel better than ever and no sign of the old headache has appeared again.

Heroes.

Not a day passes over the earth but men and women of no note do great deeds, speak great words, and suffer noble sorrows. Of these obscure heroes, philosophers and martyrs, the greater part will never be known till that hour when they will be judged by God. Small and small, and the small great; but of these the world's knowledge may be said to sleep, their lives and characters lie hidden from nations in the annals that record them.—Charles Reade.

(Cincinnati, Irish Citizen.)

Mr. C. O'Callahan, of 171 Sycamore street, is another grateful witness to the Hamburg Drops of Dr. Jacob Oehl, which he tells us has made a new man of him.

The wildest dream never surpassed the fate of the wife of the dill Napoleon sailing from England to touch at St. Helena on her way to look upon the spot in Zululand where fell the fourth and last Napoleon. The Empress is said to have looked sadly broken, and her hair has turned gray.

ALLEN'S ULCERINE SALVE,

will positively cure all old sores and ulcers of every name and description, no matter how many years standing, and how many other remedies have failed. It has been used for over fifty years and will cure the public to instance a single case where it has failed. There is no other remedy known that even claims to do what this Salve actually does and that without ever failing. If you have been suffering for one or fifty years with an ulcer, and tried ten thousand other remedies, do not fail by any means to use Ulcerine Salve for it will surely cure you. Send for descriptive catalogue containing full directions and numerous sworn testimonials; one will be mailed to any address free of charge. Price 50 cts. per bottle.

Here and There.

Our farmers are threshing.
Capt. Houghton and Mills, of Carver, were in town on Saturday.
Geo. A. DuToit, was up to Norwood on business on Wednesday.

Paints, Oils and Varnishes, at Mix & DuToit's Drug Store, Norwood.
Plums, apples, peaches and grapes, for sale at Mrs. H. Youngs Store.

Our Merchants are preparing for a big trade this fall.
The celebrated "Bevens Creek" flour for sale at Hennings & Bro., Chaska.

We understand more sidewalks are to be built near the Minneapolis Depot.
Sewing machines at low figures at Scherer's in Chaska. Call and see.

The corn and oat crop of Carver County is reported by our farmers to be simply immense.

The Minn. & St. Louis Railroad Company is doing an enormous business in the passenger line. Every train passing seems to be jam full.

Gen. Rosser, paid out about $8,000, on pay day on the H. & D. cut off last week, a good portion of which passed into the hands of our Chaska Merchants.

We are sorry to hear that Dr. Cash, of Norwood, has been confined to his bed for several days. We sincerely hope he will be all "O. K." again soon.

Eitel's flouring mill, will soon start up again, and run day and night for shipping purposes. Their flour stands good in the eastern markets.

Charles Dana, son of S. E. Dana, of our city, came up from St. Paul, and spent the Sabbath with his parents. We understand he is reading law in the office of J. B. and W. H. Sanborn.

Florian Linenfelser, Philip Henk and Joseph Franken, went up to New Ulm on Sunday, returning on Monday morning; they went up to take in the big "Turner-fest." They report a good time.

The "Chaska masons," subscribed liberally to the fund for H. J. Stradock, who had his limbs so badly frozen last winter; he is said to be a very worthy man. Gen. R. W. Johnson, of St. Paul, has the matter in charge.

Special Town Meeting.
Read the notice for a special town meeting which appears in this issue of the Herald. The meeting is called to raise a special tax to build the bridge over the Carver creek. Everybody in town should be present, as it is a matter of importance to every tax payer.

Teachers Examination.
Supt. Mix, publishes a notice to teachers, stating the time and place of "public examination" of teachers in this County. All persons expecting to teach must attend at one of these places for purpose of examination, or they will not be granted a certificate.

Special Meeting.
The secretary of the Hook and Ladder Company, publishes a notice for a special meeting in another column. The boys should take notice of time of meeting and be on hand promptly. Business of importance.

Wm. Seeger & Son.
This well known firm, in addition to running the elevator have one of the best "cash stores" in the County. They carry a large and fresh stock of groceries, dry goods, clothing, hats and caps, and boots and shoes, which they sell as cheap as the cheapest. Call and see for yourself.

DIED.
At Stewart, MeLeod Co. August 16, of Cholera Infantum Lloyd, only son of William and Lizzie W. Benson, aged 1 year and 24 days. Thereafter were buried at Carver on Tuesday.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Benson, in this vicinity, condole with them in their deep affliction.

We are informed that the "English service association" of Chaska, have made arrangements to have Rev. Mr. Oster continue services for the coming year. Each Sunday as usual. The society elect the following officers: S. E. Dana, Pres. P. Weego, Secy., and G. Kragebuhl, Treas.

REMEMBER THE GRAND HANCOCK

Rally Next Saturday.

Arrested and Released.
A warrant was placed in the hands of Sheriff DuToit, last week, for the arrest of Jas. M. Dupue, on charge of larceny. The sheriff returned with his prisoner on Friday evening, and on being brought before the justice, the examination was fixed for Monday, before Justice Fowler.

On Monday the matter was pretty thoroughly sifted, a number of witnesses being examined, Mr. Fred Hoffken, being one of the lot. After hearing the testimony the justice discharged the prisoner, saying the evidence was not sufficiently strong to bind him over to await the action of the grand jury.

REGULAR CATTLE FAIR NEXT SATURDAY.

Enlarging His Business.
P. H. Finnegan, has rented the warehouse of Mrs. Henry Young, and will fix it up in good shape for an "agricultural depot." Mr. F., is an energetic, reliable business man and has built up a very large trade in this county during the last two years.

He will put in a full line of machinery, as soon as the warehouse is completed.

TO ADVERTISERS.
Now is the time for our merchants and professional men, to hand in their advertisements to the Herald, where they will pay a handsome per centage.

Full business will soon commence and our farmers want to know where they can do the best.

Remember the grand harvest ball and picnic to be held next Sunday at Henry Degens Summer Garden. Music will be furnished by the New Prague Band.

The business place in town is Streissguth cheap store.

GRAND RALLY!!
The Hon. Eugene M. Wilson, of Minneapolis, will speak at Concordia Hall, next Saturday afternoon, at 2 o'clock p. m., upon the live political issues of the day, from the Democratic stand point.

Mr. Wilson is known as one of the most terse and eloquent speakers of the State and our citizens will enjoy a rare treat in listening to his speech.

Streissguth advertises all summer goods at cost.

A Couple of Fires.
Our quiet city was thrown into unusual commotion last Friday night by the alarm of fire on two occasions.

The first alarm was caused by the kiln roofs of Messrs. Gregg & Griswold to be discovered on fire at about nine o'clock p. m., the fire had gained such headway, however that it was impossible to save the roofs. The loss is estimated by Messrs. G. & G., at $150.00.

The second alarm was sounded at one o'clock a. m., when it was discovered that a box car, loaded with cedar posts, attached to the night freight train on the H. & D., was on fire. The car was detached from the train near Mr. Chevers residence, but the prompt response of the Hook & Ladder Company, prevented the total destruction of the car and the spread of the fire. Taken all together, the damages were slight and fortunate to the owners of the property in danger.

Hon. E. M. Wilson, at Concordia Hall next Saturday.

Mr. Otto Streissguth wants half a million more or less, bushels of wheat and barley; he will buy the same at Henk & Bierlines mill, where he has superior facilities for handling. Farmers should make a note of this, and sell their grain to the man who buys for his own account, free from the rules and dictates of any millers or wheat rings.

PERSONAL - Fred Hoffken, one of the solid men of Norwood, was in town on Monday and called in to see us.

C. Merriman and Fred Flood, of Watertown, spent Sunday in Chaska, visiting their many friends. We acknowledge several pleasant calls.

Judge E. B. Ames, of Minneapolis, spent a portion of Saturday in town, and expressed himself as surprised at the many improvements going on in our thriving young city.

Capt. Thos. B. Hunt, formerly of this place, is now stationed at Fort Sumner, New Mexico, as post quartermaster. All his old friends in Chaska, will be pleased to hear that he is prospering finely.

Mrs. Wm. B. Mohler and sister of Reads Landing have been in Chaska for a few days visiting with Mrs. Geo. A. DuToit.

H. J. Peck of Shakopee was in town on Monday.

F. E. DuToit, and M. H. Myres, attended the democratic congressional convention at LeSueur on Wednesday.

L. Streukens and family attended the funeral of Peter Wirtz, at Benton on Wednesday.

R. Zeglin and Aug. Nienmann of Hollywood, were in town on Wednesday.

Death of Peter Wirtz.

The sad intelligence of the death of Peter Wirtz, which occurred on Monday night, reached Chaska on Tuesday, and caused much sorrow, as Mr. Wirtz, was well known and highly respected in this community. His death was not unexpected, however, as he had been sick for a long time. He leaves a wife and two small children who have the sympathy of a large circle of warm friends.

The funeral took place last Wednesday from the Catholic Church, Benton, Rev. Father Braun officiating.

Death of Mrs. Adam Fischer.
Mrs. Mary Fischer, wife of Adam Fischer of Lakewood, died some two weeks ago, after a very painful illness. Mrs. Fischer was greatly beloved by her neighbors for her many good qualities of mind and heart and her death causes deep regret in her neighborhood. Her husband and six little children are to be pitied on their loss. Her funeral took place from the Catholic Church Waconia, and was one of the largest ever held in town.

ATTENTION HOOK & LADDER.
A special meeting of the Chaska Hook and Ladder Co. No. 1, will be held on Saturday the 4th of Sept. 1880, for the purpose of making preparation for an annual parade - all members are requested to be present.

P. WEEGO, Sec'y.

Mr. G. Deuss of Chanhassen, says he has purchased from Mr. P. Finnegan, a Sulky Plow, which cannot be beat. He advises all farmers to buy one.

Special Town Meeting.
The citizens of the Town of Chaska in the County of Carver and State of Minnesota, who are qualified to vote at general elections, are hereby notified that a special Town Meeting will be held at the School House in the Village of Chaska in said Town on the 20th day of August 1880 at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, for the following purposes to-wit: To take into consideration the rebuilding of the bridge on the Chaska and Carver road near J. Edingers place and to provide means for the same by voting a tax therefor and authorize the issue of the bonds or orders of said Town of Chaska in such sum as said meeting shall determine and in accordance with the statute made and provided.

The Supervisors, Town Clerk, Justices of the Peace and fifteen other freeholders of the Town, having filed in my office a written statement that such special Town meeting was necessary to the interests of the Town.

Given under my hand this 20th day of August A. D. 1880.
PETER WEEGO, Town Clerk.

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.
Notice is hereby given that Public Examination, for teachers in Carver County will be held as follows:
Norwood, Sept. 4th.
Chaska, Sept. 11th.
Watertown, Sept. 18th.
Waconia, Sept. 25th.

Examinations will commence promptly at 10 o'clock a. m. Applicants will come provided with satisfactory.

THE annual meeting of the farmers' board of trade will be held at the capital, St. Paul on Tuesday, Sept. 7th at 10 o'clock a. m.

OLE BULL, the celebrated violinist, died at his birth place, in Bergen, Norway, on the 18th inst., at the age of 70.

Danvers Commandery, of St. Paul, took the third prize in the competition of the Grand Trenchon of the Knights Templars, at Chicago last week.

The Scott County Treasury case, has finally been settled by the Supreme Court deciding that Herman Baumhager, is the lawful County Treasurer, and that John J.
Ring, is not entitled to the office.

This puts an end to a very complicated subject and relieves both Mr. Ring and the taxpayers of a very disagreeable subject.

These three McLeod County papers are terribly radical in tone since the opening of the canvass, each one is trying to out "Herod" the other. We advise our McLeod democratic friends to join together and establish and support a decent democratic journal. We believe it would take with the people of McLeod County. At least try it.

The German American Bank sold to day at auction fourteen Minnesota state railroad bonds of $1,000 each, with thirty nine coupons for interest at seven per cent, in all a debt of $35,000. Gen. J. B.
Sanborn bought them at $485 each. There were no competitors.—St. Paul Dispatch, 14th.

Hancock and English Clubs.
The Democratic State Central Committee will forward copies of constitution and by-laws for the formation of Hancock and English clubs, if application is made to P. H.
Kelly, chairman, or Robert Miller, secretary, 24 East Third Street, St. Paul.

Democratic County Convention.
The democratic County convention met at Waconia, pursuant to call of the County committee, and was called to order by Mr. A. E. Kaeder, chairman of committee, who was chosen temporary chairman. Mr. R.
Patterson, was made temporary Secy.
Upon motion, chairman appointed a committee of three upon permanent organization composed as follows: A. C. Lassen, Waconia, M. H. Myres, Chaska, and G.
Bleichner Sr. Benton.

Also a committee of three on credentials
as follows: M. Hammer, C. Merrimann, and Robert Miller.

The convention then took a recess until 1 1/2 o'clock p. m.

Upon the re-assembling of the convention, the committee upon organization reported in favor of making the temporary permanent organization. Report adopted.

Waconia 5 Chaska 11
Report adopted.

On motion the chair appointed the following committee to report a list of 12 delegates to the district Congressional convention.

C. Merrimann, M. H. Myres,
M. H. Myres, C. Merrimann,
A. C. Lassen, J. Schaler, Robert Patterson, Albert Kohler,
L. L. Baxter, F. A. Flood.

Upon motion of Mr. A. C. Lassen, the delegation of the district convention were instructed to support the Hon. Henry Poehler for a re-nomination to congress.

After three hearty cheers for Hancock and English the convention adjourned in the very best of feelings.

R. PATTERSON, Secy.

CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.

The second congressional district convention, met at LeSueur, yesterday, and was called to order by Hon. Michael Doran, chairman of the district committee.
Gen. C. P. Adams, of Hastings was called to the chair and J. V. Lewis, of LeSueur made Secretary.

After the usual appointment of committees and the adoption of resolutions, the Hon. Henry Poehler, was unanimously renominated as the democratic candidate for congress.

He appeared before the convention and accepted the nomination in a very able speech which was greeted with thunders of applause.

Other eloquent speeches were made by Hon. O. M. Hall, Red Wing, Hinds of Shakopee and Senator Doran of LeSueur.

Norwood Items.

Dr. Cash is laid up.
It has been awful dull.
We look forward to a big trade this fall. Everybody is smiling in anticipation of a rich harvest.

P. H. Finnegan, our machine man received a car load of sulky and cross plows
last Wednesday.

Our merchants are putting in an extra stock of goods in view of the large trade that will come to Norwood this fall and winter.

The Drug Store of Mix & DuToit, looks as bright and clean as a new silver dollar.
We are also pleased to learn that they are building up a big trade.

The firm of Habsen Peterson & Kraus, have dissolved partnership. Business will be continued by Habsen & Kraus, with
J. D., at the head of the Norwood branch.
Success.

Waconia Items.

J. G. Matzold, Esq., is laid up with rheumatism.

Wm. Berndt, of Chaska, is painting Mr.
Matzold's new house. He is doing a fine job.

Three steam threshers started up this week in this township, viz: Habecks, Johnson's and Broberg. Shall give you an account of how wheat turns out in our next letter.

Our grist mill will start up next week,
ready for a big fall and winter run.

Our new drug store is an important addition to our village, and is being well supported. Success.

Sheriff DuToit and Co. Att'y. Odell, were in town last Tuesday on business.—
Come often, gentls.

A. C. Lassen and Albert Kohler, two of our prominent citizens attended the congressional convention at LeSueur this week.

Watertown Items.

Dr. Flannagin of Waverly was in town
one day last week.

M. W. Devine who has been away from town since spring called on his numerous friends here for a few days, and is away again.

Still at it again, one of the Helvetia dispensers of the foaming liquid is in trouble, has been selling to a minor this time.

Our new fire bell was initiated the other day. Fire in Messer blacksmith shop, which was extinguished before it reached much headway.

A great many of the citizens in this town and surrounding country are making preparations to attend the Minneapolis

Laketown Thoughts.

Not one of our girls like to be called
"a pretty little rose bug."

Mr. Henry Gerdson raises some 400 lbs.
of honey every year, and can't be beat in this respect, by any one else in our place.
The assessor's books tell the story. Mr.
G. is very successful in bee culture, and has made it a study.

"How to write letters, and correspondence" generally should be taught more in our public schools. Lamentable lack of information among our grown up young people on subject. Many a boy, 16 yrs.
of age, has no more of an idea how even to write a letter properly, than he know how to fly.

The Laketown mosquito has six legs and only one mouth. Let us therefore be thankful that if it does bite it does not kick.

Soon we will be writing "September."

Have you noticed how rapidly the days are shortening.

Why cannot the attorneys, squires, justices of the peace, constables, policemen and "special" of Carver County join in having an annual picnic?

Of all thieves, a "Valley Herald newspaper" thief is the most despicable. That is, a thief who makes a practice of stealing the newspaper from a man's business place or residence.

Our Town Clerk and his estimable lady,
as also Herman A. Gerdson attended Divine worship at Zoar Moravian Church on the 8th inst.—Impound the cats, and also the fools.

The time, according to law, for the annual District School Meetings is near at hand. Let the people turn out en masse to attend their school meetings! A due interest in the cause of education will fill every school house; yea, there will not be room to contain all. Is there the proper interest in school matters? This is a momentous and vital question.

I went out into the woods (Palus Bieline's) and got it; after I got it, I looked for it; I took it home with me because I could not find it. What was that?

BIOGRAPHY.

Oliver Goldsmith.
On the 10th of November, 1728, there was born, in an obscure village in Ireland, a child who was destined to become one of the greatest men of a time noted for the number of great men it produced. The one to whom we refer is Oliver Goldsmith, the poet, dramatist, novelist and historian. A man who was able to enchant readers of every nation by the beauty of his writings, but who was unable to control either himself or his passions; and of whom Garrick wittily said truly remarked, that he "wrote like an angel, but talked like a fool."

He was truly a man of many parts; no matter what he attempted (with the pen) he did it well, which led the great Dr. Johnson to say that "he (Goldsmith) always did best that which he was doing." As a boy, he showed a few of the qualities which afterward distinguished the man.

He entered Trinity College, Dublin, as a sizar, or "poor scholar." Here he disagreed with his teacher, and was persecuted by him to such a degree as to render life at the college almost unbearable.

Smarting under his wrongs, he left the college, intending to embark for America. In this, as in most of his schemes, he failed, and he was persecuted by his friends to again enter college. This he did, never much persuasion, but he did not distinguish himself particularly in his studies, graduating with but moderate honors.

For the next few years his life was a wandering one. First, we find him in Edinburgh studying medicine; then on the continent, traveling through Holland, France, and Switzerland, paying his way by playing on his flute for the peasants to dance. From France he drifted over into "sunny Italy." Here he did not stay long; his flute would not sustain him, for the reason, as he says, in the "Vicar of Wakefield," that even the humblest peasant knew more about music than he did. Begging and playing his way back through France, we again find him one bright morning, in the spring of 1756, standing on the Dover docks, his hands in his pockets, and the world before him. He was well stocked with worldly knowledge, but of his goods he possessed little.

His worldly possessions were a strong Irish brogue, a stout heart, and a gambler's drift to London, where he again turns up as a writer of reviews and miscellaneous articles for the magazines, earning but little money and spending that little quickly and foolishly. Through his improvidence he was always in debt, and was consequently compelled to engage in all kinds of literary hack work, in order to sustain himself—work for which he was fitted neither by genius nor inclination. It was under these circumstances that his first great poem, "The Traveller," was finally brought out. Its success was instantaneous, and surprised even his friends and admirers. Dr. Johnson said of it that it was superior to any poem since the days of Pope. Two years later the "Vicar of Wakefield" was published, and still later appeared "The Deserted Village," admitted by all critics to be one of the finest poems ever written. The success of these productions exceeded that of "The Traveller," but Goldsmith realized nothing from either of them. He had been compelled to sell them for a trifle (compared to their real worth) before they were published, in order to keep from starving. He also wrote "A History of Rome," which was distinguished more for the beauty of its composition than for its historical correctness. His "Animated Nature" was also written about this time. It was moderately successful, and is still considered a work of great value. The merit of all these works was undeniable, and Goldsmith became famous. He was made a professor of ancient history by the King, and was lionized by all London—notwithstanding which he continued as poor as ever. He was fond of the gaming table, and he suffered accordingly. He also made his mark as a dramatist. In January, 1768, his first effort, a comedy entitled the "Good-Natured Man," was produced at the Covent Garden. In spite of its merits—even his enemies admitted that it possessed merit—it was not very successful, running only a few nights. Still it paid its author better than anything he had written.

He realized from it, to the, large sum of £500. This, like the rest of his money, was soon spent. Four hundred of the five hundred pounds was spent for a room in the Temple, and the other hundred went for furniture. Then came a period of dissipation, and he was soon poorer than ever. In 1773 "She Stoops to Conquer" was produced also at the Covent Garden, and, unlike its predecessor, it immediately sprang into favor with the public. It ran a whole season, and was the most successful play of that time. It has come down to the present day with unimpaired success, and the announcement that "She Stoops to Conquer" is to be played in any of our theatres never fails to fill the house with an elegant and refined audience. At this time Goldsmith was leading an easy, enjoyable life, earning money fast, and spending it faster, with no thought save for the present. He was intimate with all the literary lions of the day, and Monday night would

What would not some of us give for the privilege of passing one night in their midst, of becoming, for the time, one of themselves; to sit at the same table and drink out of the same bowl with Johnson and his great disciples? But as such a thing may not be, we must draw upon our imagination for a picture of the scene as it was; and dull must be the imagination of him who cannot conjure up a glowing portrait. Let us look at them as they sit in their room at the Turk's Head. At the head of the table sits the ponderous, rough-spoken, but wittily snazzy, Dr. Johnson. Near him sits Goldsmith's illustrious countryman, Edmund Burke, destined to become the first statesman of Europe, and at that time the only man in England able to test Johnson's power of argument to the utmost, but who modestly admitted that he was content to have "rung the bell" to the great Doctor. Farther down the table sits "Magnanimous Goldsmith, the Goosberry Fool," as he terms himself, his ugly face lighted up with pleasure and interest. The argument waxes warm, and impulsive "Noll" ventures to interfere, when he is silenced by a cutting remark from the sarcastic Beauchamp, who is in turn roared down by the "Doctor," while Sir Joshua Reynolds looks from behind his spectacles reproachfully upon Goldsmith, who has thus interrupted the conversation in which he was so much interested. At last, each worn out by the force of the other's genius, the giants separate, and the company disperses for the night to meet again, when the same programme will be gone through. Latterly, their meetings were held in another room in St. James' Coffee House, and here Garrick was often one of the company. Garrick, of whom Goldsmith wrote, that

It was at one of these meetings that Garrick by one of his witty remarks wounded Goldsmith's feelings. Whereupon he retired to his room, wrote that brilliant poem "Retaliation," which added so much to his reputation as a poet. These meetings were bright spots in Goldsmith's checkered career, but they were soon darkened by days of privation and suffering, which were finally ended by his death on the 4th of April, 1774.

Several persons have written biographies of Goldsmith, but perhaps the best, certainly the fairest, is the one written by our own gifted countryman, Washington Irving. Macaulay has also written of him, but it is written with an unfriendly pen, and it is better that his work should be forgotten, since it gives us a bad impression of one of whom every other writer spoke so well. Friendly or unfriendly, however, as his critics and biographers may be, they still agree that, as a writer, he has few equals; interesting, and without the vulgarity and coarseness of Smollet, and other authors of that period. Whether it was in prose or in poetry, he was as said of Garrick, "If not first, in the first line." More than a century has passed since he was laid to rest in the Temple burial grounds, and his writings still stand as models of English composition. As a man he was the embodiment of many faults and virtues, the virtues, let us hope, far outweighing the faults. Garrick wrote of him as a "scholar, rake, gamester, dupe, Christian and poet."

Scholar and poet he was, as his writings abundantly testify. Gamester he undoubtedly was, and sorely did he suffer for it. Dupe, too, he was of his own passions and inclinations, and that he was a Christian few who have read his works will be prepared to deny. Garrick might have added that he was an Irishman. His improvidence, which was only equalled by his generosity; his light-heartedness, which even the direst misfortune could not destroy; and, lastly, the brilliancy of his genius, all bear witness that he was a son of the country whose children were ever brilliant and unfortunate. Had he been a man of stronger will, and capable of overcoming his love of dissipation, he would have left a name behind him even greater than it is, but as it is he was, undoubtedly, a great man. Dr. Johnson asserts it, and other writers agree with him. A statue at the gate of the college he entered as a "charity scholar," and a monument in Westminster Abbey, with a Latin inscription by Dr. Johnson, will stand it may be for ages—when his works are forgotten, to testify to the greatness of Oliver Goldsmith, the man of many parts.—Chicago Ledger.

A KNOWING SNAKE.

A Georgia man was fishing near a rock under which was a snake's den, when the reptile came gliding from a foraging expedition, and was disappearing in the hole under the rock when, with a dexterous movement, the man seized him by the tail and threw him twenty feet away. The snake hardly knew what happened, and again essayed to enter his domicile in the same manner. Again he was treated as before. Never despairing, for the third time the wily serpent came to the rock. This time he approached deliberately, as if contemplating the situation. For a while he kept his defensive position, when he carefully began to uncoil, at the same time disappearing tail foremost into the den, to the admiration of the man who had been amusing himself at his expense.

Fifty years ago the products of our soil were scarcely thought worthy of a place in the statistics of our industry, now our exports of these amount to nearly $800,000,000 annually, and our Western granaries are treasure houses upon which the world may draw to

OUR JUVENILES.

"Good-By! Vacation is Over!"

Oh, so much to say good-by to, when the summer goes away!
The sweet, glad days of summer that cannot longer stay!
Good-by to fair green meadows, all starred with daisies white,
And the graceful nodding ferns, and grasses tall and light,
And buttercups so golden, beneath the summer sky,
Round which the yellow butterflies so lightly would fly;
And oh! the clover blossoms, sweet as the new-made hay,
Where bees would gather honey the livelong happy day.
Good-by to shady woodland, and little mountain rill,
In shadow or in sunshine its own song singing still;
And to the stately trees where the birds build their nest,
And the leaves so softly rustle to tell them to their rest;
And all the sweet, wild flowers that in the hedge grow,
And the fragrant blossoms hiding in cool, green grass below;
To meadow brooks and mill-ponds, to orchard and to lane,
We sadly bid good-by till the summer comes again.
But the barns, the fragrant barns, with doors set open wide,
To welcome summer's harvest, and the boys and girls beside,
Oh! the childish shouts and laughter, the gleeful calls that ring,
Through every stout old reaper, as from beam to beam they spring!
But alas! Good-by old barn, for vacation time is o'er—
Good-by to bean and rafter, and old grain-sprinkled floor!
To all the dear sweet hours beneath the summer's sky—
To birds and fields and blossoms we sadly bid good-by!

My Dream.

I had a funny dream last night.
I dreamed I started on a voyage in a nice little boat, rowed by two very funny-looking men, and I took an oar and soon found that I was growing very wise. I seemed to be one of the wise men of Gotham that went to sea in a bowl. However, this time the bowl was stronger, and so my story will be longer.

We saw three ships come sailing by,
Sailing by, sailing by;
We saw three ships come sailing by,
On New Year's day in the morning.

As we neared the cliffs of Mother Gooseland, I heard a sweet voice singing:
Bobby Shad's come to sea;
He'll come back and marry me.

And on the cliffs sat the sorrowful little maiden, with big tears rolling down her cheeks, and all for Bobby Shad. There we left her. Of course, in landing in a strange country, my first thought was to pay my respects to the King and Queen, but

The King was in his counting-house,
Counting out his money;
The Queen was in the parlor,
Eating bread and honey.

No audience there. So I sauntered through the queer-looking streets which were bordered by little gardens. Seeing a pretty girl looking out of a window, I said:

Miss Mary, quite contrary,
How does your garden grow?
With silver bells and cockle-shells,
And fair maids all in a row!

Pretty soon I came to a hill, and, as I looked, up went

Jack and Jill to draw a pail of water;
Jack fell down and broke his crown,
And Jill came tumbling after.

While I was grieving over them I heard the mournful cry of Ding-dong, bell! Pruey's in the well!
Who put her in? Little Johnny Green!
Who pulled her out? Great Jack Stout!
What a naughty boy was that
To drown poor summer's pusey cat.

Suddenly there was an uproar, and along came, at full speed, with a crowd in chase of him—

Tom, Tom, the piper's son,
Who stole a pig, and away did run.

Before Tom had fairly got away, I heard a shout of—

Mark, mark! The dogs do bark; the beggars are coming to town;
Some in rags, some in jags, and some in velvet gown.

Feeling tired and hungry after my walk and all the stirring scenes I had been through, I sought shelter in an inn, and said to the landlady:

"Oh, what have you got for dinner, Mrs. Bond?"
"There's beef in the larder and ducks in the pond;
Dilly, dilly, dilly, come and be killed,
For you must be killed and my customers filled!"

Just as I was putting a piece of the delicious roasted duck in my mouth, I awaked to find that I had overslept myself, and the breakfast-bell was ringing.—The Nursery.

Two Wags.

Here is a story of pluck and foresight which is worth telling to boys. Two lads, of about 20 years of age, were thrown out of situations in New York, just at the time when the Messrs. Collins were sending out laborers to open up a railway through Brazil.

"There is no actual trade," said one, "between this country and Brazil. Some day there must be an enormous trade. Somebody will make an enormous fortune. Why not you and I?"

The boys acted at once upon the idea. One sailed to Brazil, and opened an agency for American manufactures. The other remained in this country, soliciting orders for Brazilian products, and filling those obtained by his friend. Since then, a dozen others have pushed into the field; but these young fellows have the advantage of first occupancy, and bid fair to win success.

Most likely wish to grow rich. There are two ways to accomplish their end. One is by shrewd, far-sighted ventures such as this. Girard, when a cabin-boy, saw the importance of the West India trade, and the sin of his business life was to secure it.

Aspinwall put his finger on a solitary bit of coast on the map, and said: "The current of commerce must strike there." He established a line of ships to it, and his fortune was made.

A. T. Stewart saw that the public demanded a vast retail shop, where every variety of goods could be bought under one roof at honest prices, and that was the turning tide in his affairs. These longer sight and sturdier pluck than belong to most men.

If a boy has not these qualities, a sure road to riches is always open through economy. The largest number of fortunes are made by strict, unrelaxing saving of pennies. American boys scarcely know the meaning of economy. William Chambers, of the great Scotch publishing firm, supported himself through boyhood on three-pence-half-penny a day, working by day, and studying at night, and dragging himself out of his wretched garret before dawn to read to a haker of literary tastes, who paid him by a roll for his breakfast. "He who tholes (endures), overcomes," was his motto. There is none better.—Youth's Companion.

CAPITAL AND LABOR ON THE BIG FARMS OF DAKOTA.

We spent an evening in the comfortable home of one of the superintendents, and heard him explain the system of book-keeping. Every man is engaged by contract, for a certain time, to do certain work, for certain wages. He receives his money on presenting to the cashier a time check certifying the amount and nature of his labor. The average price paid to hands is $18 a month and board. In harvest they get $22.5 a day. A record is kept by the foreman of the amount of wheat turned out by each thrasher, by the driver of each wagon of the amount of wheat loaded by him, and by the receiver at the elevator of the amount of wheat brought in by each team. All the farm machinery and the provisions are bought at first hands for wholesale prices. Mules and horses are bought in St. Louis. Wheat is not stacked or stored, but shipped to market as rapidly as possible. Everything is regulated by an exact system, and this is what makes the farms a success.

Brains and energy in the man who controls them and in those whom he chooses as his subordinate officers—this is the secret of the enormous profits which have been made on the Dakota farms. The cost of raising the first crop is about $11 an acre; each subsequent crop costs $8. The average yield for this year was about nineteen bushels to the acre. This could be sold at Fargo on Oct. 1 for 80 cents a bushel. A brief calculation will give you $4.20 per acre profit on the new land, and $7.20 for all the rest; or, say, $13,000 gain on one crop. These figures I believe to be too small, rather than too large.

But does this large farming pay for the country? It also gets great tracts of land, and keeps out smaller farmers. It employs tramps, who vanish when the harvest is over, instead of increasing the permanent population, exhausts the land. The cultivation is very shallow. There is no rotation of crops. Everything is taken from the ground; nothing is returned to it. Even the straw is burned. The result of this is that the average crop from any given acre grows smaller every year, and it is simply a question of time under the present system how long it will take to exhaust the land.—Henry J. Van Dyke, Jr., in Harper's Magazine.

THE DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION.

It was upon a South Carolina plantation up in Fairfield county. The baby was taken with the croup, and Dr. Trochee, the great French physician, was called in.

"Bada-casse, bada-casse!" said Dr. Trochee, shaking his head; "but me tink me kin kore him; fech a me one new akiessee, quick!"

Mrs. E., the mother of the child, whispered to a servant, who departed, and in a few moments came running in with the newest pole-ax on the plantation, and presented it to the doctor.

"Me no want dat," said the doctor; "take a him bac, an fecha me one new akiessee—quick!"

Again the mother whispered to bring the broad-ax, thinking that would do, as it was bright and new, bought only a few days previous, and never as yet used in any way, and the servant disappeared, and sooner than it takes to tell it returned, presenting the glittering blade, full front, to Dr. Trochee.

"Take car, sir! Wanted to cut a me troat, ha! De debble! What fool, ha! me no want a dat; run fech a me new akiessee!"

Away went the servant, and reappeared this time with the hatchet.

"Le diable, what a fool! Can you no understand? Can you no fech a me akiessee?"

"Doctor," said Mrs. E., "them's all the kind of axes we have got, and we have brought you the newest on the plantation."

"Me no want dem, Mrs. E.; tink me want akiessee to cut a baby's troat? Me no want a broad akiessee, nor de narrow akiessee, nor de pole akiessee; me want a new akiessee, fechery akiessee, new fechery akiessee."

"Spell it, doctor; spell what you want; we can't understand you," said Mrs. E.

"Me want akiessee, fechery akiessee, new fechery akiessee; me no spell yu; la diable himsel no spell a me dat, by gar! Go way, jack nigger! Go way—fech a me broad akiessee an' narrow akiessee—what a fool, ha! Go way, jack nigger; me go fech a him myself."

And, leaving the family in great amusement, out went Dr. Trochee in high dudgeon, and after rummaging about awhile, returned with what he wanted—a new lead egg.

You can't always judge by outside appearances. Who, for instance, would believe the plump and sleek exterior of the ahad covered such a wilderness of bones?

A MINNESOTA farmer raised last year 700 bushels of clover seed, and is now selling it at 85 a bushel.

TWO ENGLISH COLLEGES.

Trinity College, in Cambridge, is one of the largest collegiate foundations in Europe. It is on both sides of the street, for a new court—the Master's Court—was built at the expense of Dr. Whewell, and his cipher, W. W., is on the capacious tower. The King's Gateway is the entrance to this famous college. The great canopied statue is that of Henry VIII., in whose time this vast portal was built by the scholars of Trinity.

We pass into the great court, with its velvet sward and the lofty stone conduit known as Nevill's Fountain. On one side is the Master's Lodge, with a fine selection of portraits and a set of state rooms. On the same side is the lofty gothic hall, with a high-peaked Flemish roof.

In term time, when the great hall, with its painted glass and armorial bearings, is crowded with students, the sight is remarkable enough.

On entering the chapel, the antechapel should be carefully noted, with the statue of Newton, in a sitting posture, the statue of Barrow, and the statue of Macaulay, and soon there will be one of Whewell.

A second great gateway, with the alabaster statue of Edward III., leads into the second court. On the south is a third gateway, with four towers on the angles, called, from a statue of Queen Elizabeth in her robes, the Queen's Gateway.

The library was begun by Barrow and designed by Wren. It is the most classic building in the University, in Wren's favorite style of the old Italian. It overlooks the river, and below the library is a colonnade opening on the bridge and Lime Walk. In the value of its contents this library ranks next to the University library; it possesses the mathematical MSS. of Newton and the poetical MSS. of Milton. It numbers nearly 100,000 volumes. The woodwork is by Gibbons, and the series of marble busts by Roubillieu.

Recent additions have been made of the books of Prof. Sedgwick, Mr. Tenneyson and Mr. Ellis; at the end of the room is Thorwaldsen's of Lord Byron.

The next largest is St. John's, which is famous for its series of splendid improvements. The college consists of four courts; the plain brick edifices are carried to the brink of the river, but on the other side of the river is the magnificent new court designed by Rickman, the finest modern structure of all the Cambridge quadrangles.

The massive antique gateway of the first court has the armorial bearings of the founders of this college, and Christ's College, the Lady Margaret, Countess of Richmond and mother of Henry VII. The chapel and hall are in the front court. The second court is still larger, and is one of the very few untouched by modern restoration. The third court has a cloister on the west, and the antique library, unaltered for generations, takes up the whole part of the north side. The Master's Lodge, finished in 1855 by Sir G. G. Scott, extends westward. A light, gothic bridge over the canal conducts into the new court, a stately quadrangle, with a vaulted cloister along the south side. The magnificent chapel, erected mainly by the society, and enriched with many gifts at great expense, was opened in 1869. It was erected by Sir G. G. Scott, and has some resemblance to the Sainte Chapelle at Paris. The roof and painted glass are especially remarkable. Chantry's monument to Henry Kirke White, erected at the expense of an American gentleman, is to be transferred to this chapel.—Chicago Ledger.

IN THE POLICE COURT.

Attorney for the defense of a man charged with having brutally beaten a woman, cross-examining the woman:

"Now, then, state to the court what your relations with this defendant have been."

"Well, I have supported him for two years."

"You have supported him for two years, eh?"

"You positively swear that you have supported him for two years?"

"Well, not exactly for two years, but—"

"Oh, ho, not exactly two years, eh? Your Honor will observe that the witness contradicted herself. Very well, miss, what did you mean by falsely asserting that you have supported this innocent gentleman two years? Answer that, if you can!"

"Well, I meant—"

"Never mind what you meant; don't you dare to tell me what you meant. Tell the court, now, if you please, what portion of the two years you did not support this honest fellow, my client?"

The only portion of the time I haven't supported him during the past two years was the various times he was in jail."

Attorney subsides.

A BITTER TONGUE.

It is strange but true that some people delight in saying bitter things to their neighbors. You are never safe with them. When you have done your best to please, and are feeling very kindly and pleasantly, out will pop some underhand stab, which you alone can understand—a snore which is masked, but which is too well aimed to be misunderstood. It may be at your person, or your mental feeling, your foolish habit of thought on some little secret opinion confessed in a moment of genuine confidence. It matters not how sacred it may be to you, he will have his fling at it; and, since the wish is to make you suffer, he is all the happier the nearer he touches your heart. How much unhappiness does such mean attacks cause tender-hearted men and women.

A BRIGAND'S GRATITUDE.

Statesmen have not a high opinion of the gratitude of their followers. Many of them have learned, with Sir Robert Walpole, to define it as "a lively sense of future favors." Even those who take men as they are, and do not expect all the virtues of the Decalogue in a place-expectant, have often had cause to say with Wordsworth:

I've heard of hearts unkind, kind deeds
With coldness still returning;
Alas! the gratitude of men
Hath often left me mourning.

And yet, "the still, small voice of gratitude," as Gray calls it, has frequently influenced the most obdurate of men. An English official once had an experience which taught him that even an outlaw may be swayed by gratitude.

He was traveling in a Greek province of Turkey, notorious for the number and fierceness of its brigands. One of the bands was commanded by a "Capitan," on whose head a high price had been set, and for whom a Turkish force was then seeking.

He was honored by the peasants as a regular terronese. The name, which means soiled, is, among the Greeks, the title of honor for a brigand, whose filthy garments indicate that he has been long "on the road," and so fully employed as not to have had time to wash them.

With a strong escort, the Englishman was journeying at night. An adventurous spirit led him to stray away from his companions. He was following, by the light of the moon, a forest path, when suddenly his bridle was seized by several stout fellows.

Grasping his revolver, the Englishman essayed to use it, but was prevented by the "Capitan" laying hold of it. A struggle ensued, in which the pistol was broken.

At this moment, when self-defense was out of the question, the Englishman thought of another means of protection. Removing the white cover of his official cap, he pointed out the crown on it, and announced himself as an officer of the English Government.

Instantly the "Capitan" ordered his bridle to be released, and with his companions retired a short distance to consult. In a few minutes he returned to inquire if the gentleman was a son of the Consul of the neighboring town.

"I am," was the answer.
"You are free to go where you please," replied the "Capitan," with much feeling. "Your father has saved the lives and property of many Greeks. Besides, we all love the English."

"A few miles hence," he continued, "you will fall in with the camp of the Pasha, who, with 800 troops, intends to surround yonder mountain, where he expects to intrap us. Give me your word of honor not to reveal until tomorrow the fact of meeting me; then you and your escort will be allowed to pass unmolested."

The Englishman gave the promise, and in a couple of hours entered the camp of the Pasha. There he was entertained with an excellent supper, and also with the plan for capturing the brigands on the next day.

Bound as he was by his word, the Englishman silently listened. But when, on the morning, the Pasha found his game flown, and learned that his guest had encountered the brigand, he was much annoyed. But he knew too well the English character, which regards a pledged word as an oath, to find fault with the official reticence.

THE AMERICAN HUSBAND.

It is an acknowledged fact that the average American man makes a model husband. He recognizes his wife as an equal in all things. He appreciates her sacrifices, pities her in illness, and sympathizes with her trials. He strives to be in all things her burden-bearer. But, as an offset against these good qualities, he is, in many cases, apt to be too ambitious—perhaps for his wife's sake, but still too ambitious. He purchases property; he becomes interested in town affairs; he has abilities which are appreciated by his fellow-townsmen; he is willing, he is a little vain, and readily assumes the duties and offices which are tendered him. Gradually he undertakes more and more, until every night in the week has its quota of engagements and he lives in a vortex of business. From the office to a hurried supper, thence to some meeting, to return home at midnight to deserted rooms—for all the weary ones are sleeping—thus he goes. Yes, he is tired, but it is the fatigue consequent upon excite ment and pleasant work; but how is it with the wife, left alone for weary hours, denied his loved companionship? If she has children she can interest herself in them; watching their awakening minds, conscientiously striving to mold their plastic character, but to this her mind must stoop, and stooping is a wearisome attitude mentally as well as physically. Gradually all the affairs of the family devolve upon her; she bears a double burden, and that without the help of loving sympathy. When, on rare occasions, she has her husband's company, there is little pleasure in it, for they are not en rapport as formerly; and even to his children he is a stranger.

In order to gain worldly prominence and gain, he is allowing the home happiness to slip from his grasp, and becomes to wife and children only their banker!

ITALIAN bees are so much superior to the native blacks that no beekeeper should be content without them. One season's experience with both varieties will make one feel the truth of this assertion. Italians are much more docile, will gather more honey because of the greater length of their tongues, and are more productive.
